

A BLUE GRASS PENELOPE.

BY BRET HARTE.

"Well, I don't know anyone who has a better right to know than Spencer Tucker's wife," said another with a coarse laugh. The laugh was echoed by the others. Mrs. Tucker saw the point to which she had been liberally walked, but did not flinch.

"Is there any one to serve here?" she asked, turning her clear eyes full upon the bystanders.

"You'll better ask the sheriff. He was the last one to serve here," he said, with a slight smile, "but the inevitable humorist of all Californian assemblages."

"Is he here?" asked Mrs. Tucker, disregarding the renewed laughter which followed the subtle witicism.

THE STAGE-DRIVER'S STORY.

How General Scott's Life was Saved and How the Driver Twice Escaped Death.

The traveler of the present day, as he hurried along by the lightning express, in its buffet cars and dining saloons, seldom reverses his thought to the time when the stage coach and packet were the only means of communication between distant points. It is rare that he thinks of the real old-time stage drivers, who met with their days, and when the writer recently ran across Fayette Haskell, of Lookport, N. Y., he felt like a bibliographer over the discovery of some rare volume of forgotten lore."

"Mr. Haskell, although one of the pioneers in stage driving (he formerly ran from Lewiston to Niagara Falls and Buffalo), is hale and hearty and has fair to live for many years. The strange stories of his early adventures would fill a volume. At one time when going down a mountain near Lewiston, with no less a passenger than General Scott as a passenger, the brakes gave way and the coach came to the heels of the wheel horses. The only remedy was to stop the leader and let the gallop. Gaining additional momentum with each revolution of the wheels the coach swayed and pitched down the mountain side into the streets of Lewiston, and the driver escaped by the narrow margin of the Niagara river, towards which the four horses dashed, apparently to certain death. Yet the firm hand never relaxed until the horses were turned in scarce its own length and the pale lookers-on could realize what had occurred. A purse was raised by General Scott and presented to Mr. Haskell, with high compliments for his skill and bravery."

Notwithstanding all his strength and robust constitution the strain of continuous work and exposure proved too much for Mr. Haskell's constitution. The constant jolting of the coach and the necessarily cramped position in which he was obliged to sit, contributed to this end, and at times he was obliged to abandon driving altogether.

Speaking of this period he said: "I found it almost impossible to sleep at night; my appetite left me entirely and I had a hard feeling which I never knew before and could not account for."

"Did you give up driving entirely?" "No. I tried to keep up but it was only with the greatest effort. This state of things continued for nearly twenty years until last October when I went all to pieces."

"In what way?" "Oh, I doubled all up, could not walk without pain, was unable to do any work or exertion. I had a constant desire to urinate both day and night, and although I felt like passing a gallon every ten minutes only a few drops could be passed, and the pain was so intense. Finally it ceased to flow entirely and I thought death was very near."

"What did you do then?" "What I should have done long before. I consulted a doctor, under his advice I began a new treatment."

"And with what result?" "Wonderful. It unstopped the closed passages, and what was still more wonderful I began to eat and sleep. The pain vanished; my appetite returned, and I am now well and good for twenty more years, wholly through the aid of Warner's Safe Cure that has done wonders for me as well as for many others."

Mr. Haskell's experience is repeated every day in the lives of thousands of American men and women. An unvarying rule, undermining the existence of an innumerable number of men, is to realize the danger they are in until health has entirely departed and death perhaps stares them in the face. To neglect such important matters is like drifting in the current of Niagara above the Falls.

Speaking of matrimonial yokes, a New York woman has just run away from Mr. Egge.

Important. When you go to New York City, save baggage expressage and carriage hire, and take a ticket for the Grand Central Depot, opposite the Grand Central Depot, and save a lot of money. The ticket is good for one month, and you can use it at all depots. Families can live better for less at the Grand Union Hotel than at any other first-class hotel in the city.

An Unknown Monster. For the past seven or eight years different stories have been told concerning a monster that is said to inhabit a body of water known as Crater Lake, situated about fifty miles west of North Lakeville, Oregon. The monster is said to be a large, scaly creature, and it is said to be a very dangerous one. The monster is said to be a large, scaly creature, and it is said to be a very dangerous one.

The Fashionable Color. Bank cashier to tailor: "You may take my measure for a suit of clothes."

"Exactly. What color do you prefer?" "What is the best fall?" "Well, for bank cashiers, Canada gray seems to be the favorite."

READ.

(From Our Own Correspondent.)

Death has been a constant visitor to our neighborhood lately, and scarcely has the grave closed over one before we are called on to chronicle the death of another. The words of the royal psalmist are but too true that "in the midst of life we are in death." On the 21st ult. Miss Maggie McGurn, daughter of the late Mr. Michael McGurn, died after a long illness. Miss McGurn was a most estimable young lady and had enlarged herself to a large circle of friends. She was possessed of that happy and attractive disposition that it was impossible for her to make an enemy. Her funeral took place at St. Charles Cemetery, on the 23rd ult., when there was a large gathering of friends and acquaintances who followed her to the grave.

Mr. and Mrs. John McGurn, Mr. Joseph McGurn, Miss Kate McGurn, Mr. Thomas McGurn, and Miss Sarah McGurn visited Read during the past week.

The weather changed during the past week, and we have had a good deal of rain. The rain proved acceptable as the ground was getting so hard that ploughing was out of the question, and the wells and springs were very low.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Cowan gave a dance last Thursday evening, when about 100 accepted their hospitality. The music was furnished by Mr. Morrough, his usually good style, and the guests enjoyed the pleasure of dancing away into the wee sma' hours. The harvest home, the merry dances and the apple bee are all on the move.

Before we close our correspondence, we are obliged to record another death. Mrs. Timothy O'Leary, daughter of Mr. Patrick Buckley of the eighth con. Mrs. O'Leary has been ill for some time and died on Sunday morning. It is only a year since her husband died in Colorado, where he had gone for the benefit of his health accompanied by his wife, who has now fallen a victim to the same dread disease, consumption. To her family we extend our heartfelt sympathy.

PICTON.

(From our own Correspondent.)

Your correspondent was away last week and did not forward you any items before going and since returning have not been able to find much of importance to forward you.

Mrs. Robert Forte died at her residence Saturday, after a short illness. The funeral services were held at the house Monday at 3 p. m.

Last Friday and Saturday no less than three persons died in town of consumption and several more are very low. This disease seems to be more prevalent in this county than in some of the adjoining counties, owing principally to its insular position and damp atmosphere.

Flagler & Clark, of Wellington, general dealers, have assigned in trust. They will, no doubt, get a satisfactory settlement and continue the business.

The fall Assizes were held in town last week; not much on the docket. Two of the principal cases did not come off; one was held over and the other settled in Court.

The case of Welch vs. Louche occupied a whole day, and the plaintiff got the small sum of $25.00 damages. The costs will be quite heavy, and it is reported that the defendant will carry the case to a higher court.

R. J. Cronbie, manager Bank of Montreal, has gone to the eastern province of New Brunswick, where he is to have been married on Thursday last. He is expected home the present week with his bride.

Our county show will be held the 8th and 9th of October, when several attractions will be offered, and among others I believe the Lieutenant Governor of Ontario is to be here on exhibition, which will give the town and county councils a chance to distinguish themselves by getting up first-class addresses for the presentations.

At one such occasion when royalty or her representative is to be entertained at the public expense.

The farmer Hankin is loading a cargo of barley at the farmers slide a few miles east of Picton. It was bought at 40 cents, I. O. B.

The prices of all kinds of grain are likely to be very low this season compared to other years past.

There is not much of a stir yet in the barley market here. Toronto begins to move a little, but at better prices than can be paid in these parts.

The Sealbird was seized by the bailiff last week and is tied up in the harbor.

AYER'S

Cherry Pectoral.

No other complaints are so insidious in their attack as those affecting the throat and lungs; none so trifled with by the majority of sufferers. The ordinary cough or cold, resulting perhaps from a trifling or unseasonable exposure, is often but the beginning of a fatal sickness. AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL has well proven its efficacy in a forty years' fight with throat and lung diseases, and should be taken in all cases without delay.

A Terrible Cough Cured.

"In 1887 I took a severe cold, which affected my lungs. I had a terrible cough, and passed night after night without sleep. The doctors gave me up. I tried AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL, which relieved my lungs, induced sleep, and afforded me the rest necessary for the recovery of my strength. By the continued use of the PECTORAL, a permanent cure was effected. I am now 62 years old, hale and hearty, and am satisfied your CHERRY PECTORAL saved me."

ROSLINGHAM, N. S., July 16, 1892.

Group—A Mother's Testimony.

"While in the country last winter my little boy, three years old, was taken ill with croup; it seemed as if he would die from suffocation. One of the family suggested the use of AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL, and a bottle of which was always kept in the house. This was tried in small and frequent doses, and to our delight he was half an hour the little patient was breathing easy. The doctor said that the Cough Pectoral had saved my darling's life. Can you wonder at our gratitude? Sincerely yours,

Mrs. EMMA CROSBY."

150 West 128th St., N. Y. C., N. Y., Dec. 2, 1892.

"I have used AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL in my family for several years, and do not hesitate to pronounce it the most effective remedy for coughs and colds we have ever tried."

Lake Crystal, Minn., April 6, 1892.

"I suffered for eight years from Bronchitis, and was cured by the use of AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL. JOSEPH WALDEN."

Dyalinn, Miss., April 6, 1892.

"I cannot say enough in praise of AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL, believing as I do that but for its use I should long since have died from lung troubles."

F. B. BIAUDOU, Jr.

No case of an affection of the throat or lungs exists which cannot be greatly relieved by the use of AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL, and it will always cure when the disease is not already beyond the control of medicine.

Foot Rot in Sheep.

Foot rot is of two kinds, common foot rot and contagious foot rot, the latter being more difficult to cure and requiring special treatment. Mr. Steward in his book gives the following mixture as a remedy to be used after paring and washing with carbolic soap and water:

Copper	4 OZS.
Acid	8 OZS.

Another remedy is an ointment made of finely powdered blue vitriol one pound and verdigris, one half pound and oil of turpentine, one half pound. This will dry the foot and will not be as caustic as the wash by the wet grass. In a recent number of the American Agriculturist, Dr. Thurgood gives a recipe for treating sheep which is quite popular in France, both for preventing the spread of foot rot and curing mild cases. Shallow tanks or trays are placed at the entrance of the pen, and the sheep are made as they go out and in, bathe their feet in a liquid made by slacking quicklime in water. The tanks are ten feet long, and have slats nailed on the bottom, so that the sheep will slip and fall and fall over into the caustic solution. The depth should be only enough to will cover the hoofs. Foot rot is much more common on damp soils where the sheep have to wade than on dry, sandy ones. Faring must always be attended to in such localities.

In midsummer young chickens are growing more rapidly than at any other period in the year. They love the warm weather, if they are of the larger varieties, especially; and if they have roaming room they cannot well be overfed, because they find such a variety of insect and green food in the course of their daily journeys around the farm or country plot.

Sow Now for Spring Flowers.

While our gardens present a much greater variety than did those of a half century ago, there are some plants in which the old-time favorites still predominate. The seeds of the beds of Pansies, or of Rocket Larkspurs, as were then the pride of the gardeners. Such seeds are sown in the autumn, and the seed is sown in spring, by the time the plants begin to show, the seeds are sown in the autumn, and become fewer and smaller in order to have the flowers in spring, sow the seeds early in this month. Make a spot of rich soil fine, and scatter the seeds evenly over the whole board. Sow the seeds, silt a little soil over them, and press down firmly with the board. Then cover with a layer of straw, and plant them to the place they are to flower. The plants are quite hardy, and all the seeds will grow. To keep the snow from pressing too heavily upon them. The Rocket Larkspurs are, unlike the fall ones, annuals. A bed of them will grow in a well enriched bed this autumn, and leave them to flower where they were sown. The seeds are sown in the autumn, and in the winter, and if the plants are too much crowded in any part of the bed next spring, they may be removed to another place. They do not transplant so actively.

Meadows should not be closely grazed at any time, and especially not in the fall. They need to have fertilizing materials added, and the animals should be kept young. Young animals are much more injurious to the mature ones, while full grown stock that are being fattened, and are fed rich grain and hay, will do little harm. The young stock to the fertility of the soil. Young growing stock withhold a large share of the potato, the corn, and nitrogen of the food to build up their bones, leaving the manure comparatively poor. On the other hand mature fattening animals need very little of the food, and their manure is very fertile. Aside from the loss of plant-food, the feeding of stock on meadow land does mechanical damage. If the soil is soft, these animals will trample the surface, and grazing pull much of the grass up by the roots. Meadows, like winter grains, are injured by trampling and treading, and the plants need to be kept young. The young plants fall, with a good growth of late-maturing grass, and the young stock is kept for protection from the frosts, win, etc., and the manure is left on the surface, and as a top-dressing, will strengthen the plants, and insure a fine crop the next season. This application is best when made soon after the frost has set in. The surface of the soil of the scable material is washed out by the soil by the fall rains. Quick acting manures, such as sulphate of ammonia, and superphosphate, will lose their value if the growing season is not wise loss is sustained. To get good crops from the meadows, for other uses, grazing is essential. They are equally and often injured by sheep and in late autumn.

The albuminoids are less in buckwheat than in wheat; in fact, not much more than half as abundant, while there is a greater amount of starch and fat. Buckwheat is therefore, shown by analysis to be more fattening and less strengthening than wheat. It makes an excellent feed for pigs and poultry. Many persons believe that buckwheat is not healthful, and causes skin eruptions. Several other members of the

One great merit of buckwheat is its availability as a second crop, thus replacing a mother that has been destroyed by frost, drouth, insects, or otherwise. It is also valuable as a weed exterminator. The infested land may be tilled until mid-summer and sowed with buckwheat, which by growing rapidly smother the weeds. Another use is that of a green manure. It grows well on moderately poor land, and makes a large growth of straw, which rots quickly when plowed under, thus adding much vegetable matter to the soil.

So far as my experience goes, there is no more trouble in raising an early lamb than a late one. In fact, our earliest lambs are almost always in my best lambing. I would not have lambs come in January and February than in April, May, and June. I could have them earlier, and they would come earlier, if I ran earlier in autumn than the English breeds of mutton sheep. For this reason, if, for other, in raising lambs, I have no objection to the common Merino ewe, or at any rate to ewes having more or less Merino blood in them. There are other ewes. There are more of them in the country, and they can be obtained cheap. They are healthy, hardy, and thoroughly capable of raising lambs as well as the English mutton ewes. They are smaller, eat less, and occupy less room in winter quarters. They are more numerous, and they are better for English sheep—or rather, they suffer less, if it is a mistake to keep any sheep in too close quarters, and they are more numerous, and they will feed, give rich milk, and, if you want early, fat lambs for the butcher, the mothers, no matter what breed they may select, will give plenty of milk.

When young men desire to enter college, they are obliged to pass an examination in grammar, algebra, geography, etc. Those elementary studies are not taught in colleges. The private or public school fits the student for college. In like manner, young men should be constrained to pass an examination in plowing, hoeing, sowing seeds, etc., before entering agricultural colleges. The farm should be to them the public or private school. Why should farmers' sons spend their time in learning in agricultural colleges what they can as well learn at home?

A curious case is before the Tribunal in Paris. A gentleman was getting down from an omnibus in a crowded thoroughfare, and, in the confusion, fell headlong backward, and, to recover his balance, caught hold of another passenger. The latter, taken by surprise, also found himself falling backward, and, to avoid a fall, caught hold of a woman with an infant in her arms, the upshot being that all four rolled together into a heap, and lay motionless along the sidewalk. The gentleman, who had not been for the prompt cessation of the omnibus conductor, who, however, had been unable to do anything to save some of the prostrate forms. As it was, the gentleman, who was the original cause of the accident escaped with a few scratches, but the woman, who was falling on him, was not hurt at all, and the infant was equally fortunate; but its mother had her arm broken, and sustained other injuries. The question now is whether the other gentleman should pay damages in the question—the one who caught hold of her, or the one who caught hold of him.

The beauty of autumn, the bounty of autumn, the beneficence of autumn, these things have often been descanted upon, and worthily so; but there is a kindred theme often overlooked, viz.: The [Solemnity

the change that comes over the face of our duration between June and October is not less striking than the change that comes on between youth and old age. In both cases, trials play an important part in the transformation. Sun and wind, and biting frosts, and the fall of the leaves, and the scattered and the fruit. And is not character ripened and beset by providential trials? Is not the beauty of the autumn life more conspicuous for the beauty of the ripened leaf than for the deformity of decay; whose character glows with love and wisdom and sympathy, and whose beauty is more lovely and more humble, more pure, more marvellous as the winter of the graves draws near? Is not the beauty of the autumn of action as not a gloomy solemnity, but a gladness. It contains the promise and potency containing seasons. The fruit is matured and ready for the harvest. The seed is sown in germ springs and summers and autumns yet to be. And has not the Christian's life a harvest of glory and peace and useful in the autumn of life? "Marvel not this, for the hour is coming, in the which all that are in their graves shall hear His voice, and shall come forth; they that have done good, unto the resurrection of life; and they that have done evil, unto the resurrection of damnation. Ye, presently are the harvest of the world, and shall be honored with immortality, eternal life."—this fruitage of life can only spring from Christ the life-giver, bestower of life, and the resurrection life. "As is the earthy such are they that are earthy; and as is the heavenly such are they also that are heavenly. As the seed is sown in the earth, so shall the earthy, we shall also bear the image of the earthy." "He that has ears to hear let him hear" let us profit this present preacher on the subject of the solemnity of autumn.—Presbyterian.

At one end of the main palace is a handsome cream colored mosque with two minarets. Around this, though kept at a respectable distance, were crowds of people. The street leading to the mosque was also lined with an expectant multitude. Men were sweeping the streets clean, and then sprinkling fresh gravel over it, to make it smooth. The Turkish army is well drilled. Presently everything was complete, and soon after the utter of arms appeared in the distance. The escort of artillery was an immense one, presenting the very flower of the Turkish army. They are well-developed men, elegantly uniformed, and under thorough discipline, as was evidenced by the admirable and the few evolutions performed instantaneously.

Of course I could not get a good view of the Sick Man owing to the tantalizing movements of the boat. He is apparently of medium height, and others who were present say, has an expressionless face, a motive of dissipation. Perhaps his sickness is not wholly political. He was dressed after the best approved French style, in a black suit, with a black coat, black tie, and the national cockade as a headress. The lapel of his coat was distinguished by two or three decorations, including, doubtless, the Star and Order. I am told that his devotions commenced an hour.

It is asserted on the authority of persons who have recently been in the area that the increase of trout in its waters has over stocked the lake. At times the trout are seen massing themselves in the small streams which are tributary to the lake, and on these occasions they have been crowded out on the grass growing on the banks of the stream. Thousands could be crowded out with a pitchfork. A piece of dark brown trout into the lake will cause a dozen or more of trout to leap for it. The coyotes have caught the knack of fishing and will sit on the shore watching the fish fall into the water. The instant the fish touches the water the fish rise, and like a flash the coyote bounds into the thick of the fish, and it is certain to bring out one or two in his mouth. The coyotes are shot and killed, but by stealing the fish from the mouth of the coyote in the underbrush they manage to escape observation.

It was about the same date (1855-56) that the gracious queen set the fashion of wearing a scarlet under petticoat, an idea obtained from the milkmaids at Balmoral. I said that the late Prince Consort, in accordance with the prevailing opinion of the land, suggested that her majesty should adopt one also. This sealed the fate of light petticoats in England. They had been worn, previously to that, both in summer and winter, and, of course, in one or the other of the two months several had to be worn at one time, and the weight to be carried on, the waist, (since the introduction of the scarlet skirt the fashion of the colored petticoat has been maintained, and the use of the petticoat with leather girdle, in the reduced form of walking in the country in muddy weather.

A Potato Crop Destroyed Lightning

A flash of lightning struck an entire potato field of several acres belonging to N. Wood, of North Sterling, Conn. The vines turned yellow and sprawled over the ground. When Mr. Wood went to dig them a few days ago he found not a potato in the whole piece. It is the first instance on record the in which a growing crop was destroyed by the electric fluid.

The igneity of the agate waxes is continued merely to cutting, carving and polishing the material into all manner of shapes and ornaments, and is not increased by artificial means. The layers composed of agate differ considerably in porosity, so that those that are transparent, for example, are more easily stained than those which are opaque. Indeed, some are to altogether impervious to ordinary temperature and pressure; and some are so porous that they have even had to avail themselves of the steam in applying their staining processes. A suitable agate, after being thoroughly dried, is placed in a vessel which contains either oil or in olive oil, and is kept thus for at least three days, exposed to a moderate heat, then washed, dried, and put into a vessel containing a mixture of sulphuric acid and water. The vessel is thereafter exposed to a gentle heat for a varying number of hours, when the agate is removed and washed with much darker in color. The reason of this is that these layers, having become saturated with the symp or oil, are acted upon by the acid, which is absorbed by the pores, or is only contained and forms in its place deposits of carbon. It is in this way that the darker agate is produced. The lighter agate is stained with white and grey, using in the production of canals and intaglios. Exposure to a strong sunlight was long ago found to be the best method of staining the agate, and this suggested the burning of stones, and so to convert them into carnelians. At Oberstein, likewise, the agate is exposed to a strong fire, then saturated with sulphuric acid, and afterwards exposed to an earthenware crucible to a red heat. The agate is then washed with water, and is to be of a bright red color. Not content with imitating the rarer natural varieties of agate, such an oxyd acid is used to stain the natural stones, and all sorts of colors unknown to the natural stones. Aniline dyes, mineral acids, and other reagents are used for agate staining. It is possible that the stones themselves may yet be artificially produced. (Industries of Gemstones, a Florentine Gemologist's History of Gem's). A Florentine anatomist long ago accomplished this, although unfortunately, the second half of the century has not been able to imitate the vices in real arates. "In the hoopings of San Siro may be imposed still by the incision of the skin, and the insertion of a bag of urine, livers, etc., thus agate is introduced into large livers—about four or five inches in diameter. The banquet of vapors unknown for Bowerbank states that in the most agates of Oberstein he has found microscopic organisms, and that the agate is a fossilized organic remains of considerable size in agate from Ayshire and other localities. MR. J. P. Martin is now local agent for that famous medicine Ochta-wah's Indian Oil, which possesses wonderful virtues and meets with constant and ready sale.

TWO boys in the east end were playing "twist" with a rotten egg the other day, the result of which was that one caught the unsavory fruit full in the face presenting a fine spectacle for a few minutes.

CAITIE'S Boot and Shoe Store is the great emporium of the east end. He has recently made the largest importation of leather ever brought in Deseronto, and is prepared to do more work than ever.

ALL SAINTS (Upper Mohawk).—The harvest thanksgiving service in All Saints Church is appointed for Thursday, 12th Oct., at 11 o'clock a.m. The Church will be as usual handsomely decorated.

THE Napanee Standard is giving its readers a series of excellently written articles on the Napanee and Tanaworth Railway, which show the vast capabilities of the country through which that line is constructed.

ACQUINT.—The Hero ran around last Saturday evening near Bath, and in consequence of this mishap did not arrive in Deseronto until 1:30 p.m. on Sunday. It is a rare thing for that popular vessel to thus come to grief.

W. H. CARMONOVSKY, now of Port Arthur, is visiting friends in Kingston. He says that his child, which disappeared many months ago has never been traced. He thinks it met its death by drowning, having been last seen on the dock.

CONCERT.—A concert and literary entertainment under the auspices of the Ladies' Missionary Society of the Church of the Redeemer will be held in the Union Sabbath school room next Tuesday evening at 7:30 o'clock. Every preparation has been made to ensure a grand success.

CRICKET MATCH.—A return match at cricket will be played to-day (Thursday) in the Hospital field between the Picton Club and our local club. Picton has the best team in Central Ontario and the game ought therefore to attract a large number of visitors. The game will commence about ten o'clock.

CHORAL.—The singing in St. Mark's Church last Sunday evening was in every respect superior, the efforts of the choir being powerfully supplemented by Mr. H. Upton, travelling auditor of the Grand Trunk, who was present on the occasion. The song-sermon and praise service in the Methodist church drew a large congregation, the church being crowded, the singing being excellent and all the services hearty and attractive. At the Church of the Redeemer, Mr. Barren rendered a solo in a manner worthy of all praise.

CHRIST CHURCH.—A Harvest Thanksgiving service was held in Christ Church (Lower Mohawk) last Sunday, which notwithstanding the short notice and very unfavorable state of the roads was quite successful. As however there were many necessarily absent who no doubt desire to see the exquisite decorations and contribute towards the Sunday School fund on behalf of which a collection was taken up, the decorations will remain up over next Sunday, 5th Oct., and further aid will be asked for the Sunday School.

An interesting event which is causing quite a flutter in social circles takes place at Christ Church to-day.

BURGERS.—Burglars have been making attempts recently on the residences of Mr. Jos. Baldwin and C. Dryden.

ANDERSON, the new watchmaker, illuminates the east end of Main street. He finds Deseronto just the place he has been looking for.

MR. WATSON KIRK, of the Indian Store, reports business brisk at his establishment, and is prepared to sell groceries at lower prices than ever.

SERENADES.—On Monday night the Deseronto Cornet Band called at the residences of H. B. Rathbun Esq., and Mr. F. G. Jenkins, playing a number of spirited airs in good style.

The Big Store reports very heavy sales during the last two weeks, their recent importations from Britain being unequalled in Central Ontario. Sugar and groceries at bottom prices.

BIBLE SOCIETY.—The Annual Meeting of the Deseronto Branch Bible Society will be held (D. V.) next Monday evening, 6th inst, in the Union Sabbath School room (White Church) at 7:30 o'clock. The annual reports will be presented business transacted and officers elected. Addresses will be delivered by Rev. Dr. Hodgkin, Agent, and the resident clergymen of Deseronto. It is trusted that there will be a very large attendance on the part of the public, the meetings of this Society being always deeply interesting.

BLUE RIBBON.—The opening meeting of the Deseronto Temperance Society last Friday evening proved a success, the addresses of Rev. Messrs. Baker and Crossley being encouraging and aggressive, and Mr. Bedford's readings as usual excellent. Four little girls sang some selections very sweetly and at the close a goodly number of the audience signed the pledge. A meeting of members only will be held in Rathbun Hall on Friday evening, at 7:30 p. m., and as business of great importance is to be transacted it is hoped there will be a full attendance.

LUMBER OPERATIONS.—Mr. T. Butler has already commenced active operations in the lumber woods and is busy hiring men, sending in parties and supplies and building shanties. It is thought that the operations of the coming winter will be fully as great as those of last season. Mr. James Murphy, foreman, is building a new shanty at Grimsby, and Edward Walsh commenced cutting in the same township on Tuesday of last week. On Saturday Samuel Alexander commenced cutting in Olden. Each of these foremen has thirty men engaged at present.

settling and the horses giving way, which resulted in the horse to escape and make off

has returned to town.
Pretence to resume his practice, not likely that of skipping out with the hired girl of

I learn they buried their infant child while

The approaching election on the Scott Act the 20th inst. does not seem to create very much agitation as yet on either side.
It is difficult to predict how the decision will go, as this is a very changeable consistency, and the growing of hope and bac-ley are among the first principles of this country, and self interest is quite an important matter.

News from Vennachar will be perhaps interesting for the simple reason it is one of the most northern places in the county of Lennox and Addington, and is situated on the Snow Road. Perhaps you will wonder why the road is called Snow Road; merely because the foreman or overseer when the road was first made was a Mr. Snow, and not because we have now here the whole year. So much for that.

Lennox can boast of having as many, if not more white people, than any county in Ontario.
Any man who was never beyond Cloyne, knows but very little of the beauty and scenery that old Lennox possesses. It is wonderful to behold! I have often heard the following expression used: "I would not live away back in the country, I would live in the Snow Road." Very well, to such persons I would just say, "keep your seats while you are reading yourselves," but show me those who have not. Why is it that so many parties come back here every place, two numbers to mention is it not for pleasure, enjoyment and fun, obtained by hunting deer and bear? Certainly then this is the place to live where you can have your pockets full of pleasure all the time. Now for fear I will occupy too much space in your columns, I will be obliged to write in "Faint" soon.

The temperance people of Lennox will probably wait until Hastings and Frontenac have adopted the Scott Act, before they try it.

The Stirling News Argus considers the issue as a loss of place for Hastings and Frontenac.

It is known of course as a result of the issue of gross cruelty in those institutions;
let us have an investigation.

thought I would take the opportunity of the kindness by sending you a few lines, which may be of some interest to some of your readers. I am not sure, but I might just say I will be very happy to send you news at intervals, for publication.

KINGSTON.

(From our Own Correspondent.)
Your Kingston correspondent visited the Fair and describes it in his own style.

Responding to the hack driver's call of all aboard, we climbed into the caravan (first being assured that his charge was only 5 cents) and was whirled along with a merry crowd to the Fair ground. The streets along were crowded with people as the day was quite cool, and a good natural rally was kept up all about the line. To a country couple who seemed all taken up in themselves we would say, "Look out there, we're watching you," and would receive the answer that "You're too cute."
Or to a crowd of smiling girls which we would at the start have to make, would invite for a ride, but would be glad to retire before they got through with us. Arriving at the show ground we passed in the straight and narrow gate (for a quarter) receiving the first of the most year probably newspaper men would be allowed in free. The first celebrity our eye meets is Sheriff Ferguson, who seems bent on making hands with everyone.

The roar of working machinery attracts our attention, and we gaze on self-raisers and builders by the dozen; and the attendants who were willing to show the farmer the many advantages of the machine and present him with their card, hoping to have the pleasure of sending him one on for the season of 1885. We pass into the Palace and view the candy making by Rees Bros, who cannot supply the sweetness fast enough.

Passing around the building we look at the exhibits of the Kingston Knitting Co., which we before did not suppose could turn out such good work. The cotton wool also showed up with the same cottons winning medals at Ottawa. The Crompton Sewing Co., of Toronto, made a handsome exhibit. The Singer Sewing Machine Co. also had a fine display. Chown & Cunningham had stoves for the million.
Messrs. Gibbard & Son of Napesee made a grand display of bedroom furniture. A thousand and one things are there. Crazy quits, innumerable, guarded carefully by aged spinners all waiting for first prize.
Passing out on the ground we find the do to do to do in an unspiced parcel in the hands of seemingly eager females, who said, "I'll teach you to put my name in the paper." We could not see any other paper than by complimenting her on her youthful appearance, and soon her wanted smile was with her again. Our eye catches Bill West, the auctioneer, dressed in fancy costumes and we passed to listen to Wm.
Producing a knife, he says, "Ladies and gentlemen there is an article that would cost you double the price I sell for in any store in the country, polished handle, dan-dus blades. I'll sell that knife for 70c."

CONSECON.

Mr. J. Ward has been seriously ill for some days from an attack of diphtheria, but she is now much better, we are pleased to hear.

A very enthusiastic and interesting Temperance Meeting was held in the Presbyterian church Monday night. Excellent speeches were given by Rev. Mr. Baker, Wellington, Rev. Mr. McLeod, Rev. Mr.
Pickett and S. B. Netherly, of Consecration, and Mr. G. W. McMullen, of Trenton.

There has been no barley sold here yet, and not over ten thousand stored. The present prospects are not very encouraging for farmers, the prices being very low.

Judge Jellett, and J. Soly, of Pictou, are enjoying a few days of duck shooting near here.

Dr. Thornton's house is fast approaching completion. The brick work has long since been done and the slate laid on the roof.
It represents a very fine appearance.

PERSONAL.

Mr. W. B. Rathbun departed on Saturday to attend classes in the Royal Medical College, Kingston.

Mr. and Mrs. Herbert B. Rathbun have returned home from a pleasant trip to Oswego.

Mr. E. Coleman arrived last week to again take up his residence in Deseronto.

In these dirty many newspapers try to increase their sales by beastly obscenity. We have more than one that are simply sewers through which filth is brought out in the police courts are heard. Even stories of the vilest character—stories that only have an existence in the low and vile minds of the writers, are published. The press all the wrong it has wrought. We wish we could hold up to the public gaze all the lies and deceptions it has practised, the homes it has wrecked, the young men and women it has led astray. It would not be a question of its decline, for the outraged public would not let it appear at all. We believe in the freedom of the press as we do of the man until after we believe that the same law that punishes him should be meted out to the press.—Agents' Herald.

ANNOUNCEMENT.

We beg to announce that, commencing with next week's issue, THE TRIBUNE will in future be published on Saturday instead of Thursday as formerly. This change will, no doubt, meet with the approval of business gentlemen, and reading notices to reach the public as near the end of the week as possible. It will also, we are informed, be in the interest of country districts many of which receive mails only on Wednesdays and Saturdays. All changes of advertisements, etc., should be in our hands at noon on Thursday. We hope the change will prove acceptable to all the patrons of THE TRIBUNE.

It is to be regretted that the movement to secure a ferry boat to run to Fredericksburg and Sphasburgh did not meet with that success which it deserved. This failure may, however, have been all overruled for good as we have come to the conclusion that we can suggest a more excellent way of securing proper communication with Prince Edward. We have long considered it strange that a bridge has not been constructed across the bay at some point near this village, more especially as the engineering difficulties would not be great nor the expense so very heavy. Such a bridge, which might be built at Telegraph Island, Powlis Ferry, or any other suitable point, is now a necessity and we imagine that the matter only needs to be considered and agitated in order to secure its accomplishment. There would be, it is true, a great deal of such a structure would impede navigation but in these days such an argument would not avail. The bridge could be made of such a character that it might carry both railway and ordinary carriage traffic if the necessities of the future should so require. It requires but little argument to point out the benefits which would accrue from such an undertaking. Sphasburgh, Picton, and Prince Edward, generally, would reap great advantages while Deseronto, Tyendinaga, and Hastings would all alike be materially benefited. All these municipalities would willingly take stock in this new venture and it might reasonably be expected that the local government who have never yet had the opportunity of doing much for the bay section would also make a large grant. Here for the present we rest our case.

CONVERSATION.

The Conversations under the auspices of the Ladies Missionary Society of the Church of the Redeemer, held in the Union Sabbath Schoolroom on Tuesday evening, drew a full house and proved encouragingly successful. Dr. Newton filled the position of chairman in a happy and acceptable manner. His opening address was a plain practical appeal on behalf of mission societies of which, as he stated, some are disposed to speak slightly. He showed how the missionary was the pioneer of commerce and civilization, and how India and Japan as examples. He next drew attention to the vast field for Home Missions in Canada, which was practically unlimited. There was every argument, therefore, for the public to accord a hearty support to the missionary societies. The programme was then entered on, Mr. Malloy giving a solo very nicely, followed by a piano solo by Miss Smith, whose effort met with hearty approbation. Mr. Emerson gave his evidence to the great amusement of the audience and then Mr. and Mrs. Campbell gave some selections on the piano and violin. This was a feature in the evening's entertainment, the performance being loudly and deservedly enjoyed. After an anthem from the choir an intermission was afforded in which refreshments were served by the ladies of the Society. Rev. Mr. Cronley received an encore for his successful rendering of his song "The Old Farm." Miss Anderson and her sister rendered a duet very well and Mr. Harry Burgess a solo satisfactory to all. Mrs. Campbell, who has a very sweet musical voice, followed with a song which elicited an encore, and she responded. The Chairman springing an old friend, Mr. John Gough in the audience, invited him to favor the audience with a song. Mr. Gough complied in his usual style. Mr. Campbell's speech brought down the house, and Mr. Barrett then sang "Prince Charlie," which being encored, he sang "The Bonnie Boat." The pleasant entertainment was then brought to the close by the audience singing the National Anthem.

Wedding Chimes.

There was a large gathering in Christ Church, Tyendinaga, on the morning of Thursday, Oct. 2nd, the occasion being the marriage of Miss Caroline Helen, only daughter of E. H. M. Baker, of Tyendinaga, to William Lewis Roberts, merchant of Hastings Mills, Ont. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Ruan Deane Baker, father of the bride, assisted by Rev. J. W. Burke, Rector of Belleville, and the Rev. T. G. Porter being also present in the church, vested. Mr. Willie Baker gave away the bride. The bridemaids were Miss Burton, Miss Maudie Pile, Miss Patton and Miss Edwards, while the groom was attended by Messrs. G. H. Baker, Archie Hallett, J. G. Hopper and Sidney

Baker. The bride, one of the most engaging and popular young ladies of this district wore a dress of cream colored silk with train, all trimmed with rich and beautiful lace. The bridemaids were most tastefully and elegantly attired. After the completion of the ceremony, Miss Lydia Hill, on behalf of the congregation presented the bride with a handsome miniature gold chain suspended between two silver pendants. This valuable present of beautiful design, was accompanied by flattering address, to which Rev. Mr. Burke on behalf of the bride replied, thanking them for this altogether unexpected expression of their esteem. As the party retired from the church, the children of the Sunday school, anxious to show their good will on the occasion, threw flowers on the path before the happy couple. After the event an adjournment was made to the parsonage where a wedding breakfast was served. The company that health could now be drunk in tea and coffee just as well as in spirits. "The Guests," was proposed by Rev. Mr. Baker and the toast responded to by Rev. T. G. Porter. The bride's presents were elegant and costly and included among others a crimson cashmere morning robe beautifully embroidered with white silk and costing one hundred dollars. This was the gift of Mrs. Edwards of Belleville. The bride party subsequently drove in carriages to the railway station, and took the train for the Junction, where Mr. and Mrs. Roberts departed by the eastern express on a wedding tour to Cohoes, N. Y. and New York city. As they boarded the train they received a shower of rice and set out followed with the best wishes of a host of friends.

HALL'S Vegetable Sicilian HAIR RENEWER

was the first preparation perfectly adapted to cure diseases of the scalp, and the first successful restorer of faded or gray hair to its natural color, growth, and youthful beauty. It has had many imitators, but none have so fully met all the requirements needed for the proper treatment of the hair and scalp. Hall's Hair Renewer has steadily grown in favor, and spread its fame and usefulness to every quarter of the globe. Its unparalleled success can be attributed to but one cause: the entire absence of its ingredients. The proprietors have often been surprised at the receipt of orders from remote countries, where they had never made an effort for its introduction. The use for a short time of HALL'S HAIR RENEWER would improve the personal appearance. It cleanses the scalp from all impurities, cures all humors, forer, and dandruff, and stimulates the hair, and enables them to push forward a new and vigorous growth. The effects of this article are not transient, like those of most of the preparations, but remain a long time, which makes its use a matter of economy.

The County of Hastings is one of the largest in Ontario. It stretches from the Bay of Quinte back over hundred miles into the Ottawa Valley. It touches seven other counties, and has five distinct lines of railway running through it. Until lately the means of communication with the rest of it was by the Farmers' Hastings Road, remarkable for its length and roughness. The Ontario Central R. R. runs from Trenton for seventy-two miles into the County, as far as the township of Wollaston, has shortened the time of the journey to the westward of the journey to L'Amable, Bancroft and Maynooth.

It was our good fortune lately to take a trip over the Ontario Central from Trenton to its extreme northern terminus—Cochill—in the Township of Wollaston. It was, yet early morning when we boarded the train at Trenton station. Trenton lay bathed in mist, which the rising sun was already dispelling. The bridge, the mill, the hill, were the conspicuous landmarks. In the harbor, the Varma was preparing for her daily trip down the bay. Crossing the bridge were mechanics with tools and dinner-pails on their way to work. From up the river came the sounds of the river-drivers; and as the Gilmore whistle sounded for six o'clock, our train glided out of the station. It has been service. The passenger car was not made this year, nor within five years. We wonder why it is not more noisy. For our trip ends we see that it is suited for its work, and that a finer car would be a waste of money. The rough traffic necessary to a mining region. Rocks, stumps, miners' tools, camp-supplies, and surveyors' instruments, are not the best neighbors for paint and plunk, and polished woodwork. The latter will all come in time, when the traffic permits it. The wonder is that the train is efficient, considering its rough work.

On leaving Trenton, the track cuts closely on the grounds of the Roman Catholic and Church of England parishes, especially in the latter, destroying the beauty and retirement. Running along the west side of the Trent, the track crosses the G. T. R. near its station, at what is known as the Diamond Crossing. Here, belonging to the former, are quite a cluster of work-shops, whence comes the hum of machinery and men. No leaviness is added here to the scenery by the unpainted houses along the G. T. R. station. Why are Canadians so far behind their American cousins in this respect?

We soon reach Frankford. It has not changed in twenty years, when we last saw it. It is a struggling hamlet, whose prominent buildings are three churches, and a large school. "More business done here twenty-five years ago than now," remarks a stout countryman, who has just come aboard. Formerly there was a good market for grain, wheat especially being much grown.

Further on, the track crosses the Trent at Chisholm's Mills, where a small canal and lock remind one of the fabled Government Trent Works, which were to open navigation from Quinte to Haron. We soon cross the Midland Railway, running here and good farms. Great care is taken of the Canadian thistle, but its frail life may languish. Its culture is a success. We should estimate the crop at one hundred bushels to the acre. At the same time we would suggest a change of seed, from the old country thistle, or some such wool as the poorer bird, looks much better, and is more profitable.

After leaving Midland Railway Crossing and approaching Rawdon, the country becomes hilly, until at the latter place we have an outcrop of old limestone deeply marked. This is the best station on the line. So far, the road-bed is magnificent, and remains so until we reach the Ontario and Quebec R. R. which strikes a sharp westward grand belt of steel not excelled. At the crossing, already are laid the foundations of an extensive passenger and freight depot. We pass Spring Lake, without knowing it. Bush and swamp, with open country succeed each other. As we reach Marmora, we look in vain for the village of that name. There is nothing but a country-road, a neat little station, a hill, a grove, a lumber-team, a half-dried brook. Alone with its log-shanty is passed. A rich gravel pit is near.

El-Dorado! what a misnomer! Who gave it? Then Rannokburn, shades of Bruce! that such a hamlet should boast so illustrious a name is a slur upon its Scottish namesake. From this point on, the track runs almost parallel with the Hastings Road, crossing it several times, and again again exciting it in roughness. Passing Mill-bridge, we have a long run through heavy swamp and rock, until Beaver Creek or Glimore is encountered in a stumpy field. St. On is a pretty name and that is all. At Bass Creek we stop for water. This is simply a halt in the woods. A countryman enters the car and tries the water-can. It is empty, and he leaves it with the remark, "that water can is drier than I am." Passing on we come to a large gravel-pit, at which in operation is a steam excavator loading a long ballast train. The buildings required for the men resemble those of a lumbering depot. It is old to see telegraph wires running into a log shanty. Bass Lake is passed on the left and we draw up on the Hastings Road at Rathburn. Where the woods are in the log shanty is a log shanty, an unfinished barn, a man, a dog, the road, and this is Rathburn.

We gladly move on. Conila's Lake, a pretty sheet of water, the left, Peter Lake on the right, and a broken-down gold mine on the left, usher us into the famous Wollaston Mine, locally known as the Cobell. Our trip has occupied six hours. It is time for dinner, and as we drop off, and cross the uneven ground to the Boarding House, we see the workmen toiling in the mine. We defer a visit to the mine until we have recruited our strength in the Dining Hall.

The Tea which was imported by the Big Store this fall is the best value ever offered in this vicinity. Already they are receiving orders from a distance for chest loas. If you have not used any, call and get a sample.

A peculiar virtue in Ayer's Sarsaparilla is that while it cleanses and purges the blood from all corruptions and impurities and thereby roots out disease, it builds up and invigorates the whole system, and makes one young again.

The steam dredge 'Ontario' still continues her operations at Shannonville, and has succeeded in deepening the channel so that vessels drawing twelve or thirteen feet of water will be able in future to enter that port. She is at present working at Goodwin Point about half a mile from the village, having cleared all obstructions from the mouth of the Salmon River to that point as well as for a distance of about three quarters of a mile out into the bay. There are still three more bars to be removed which it is supposed to be accomplished by the middle of November. Vessels will then be able to load grain at the village without running any risk. This will be a great benefit to the community, and the dredge and tug have by their kindness and courtesy become quite popular at Shannonville as well as at other points on the bay. The crew of the 'Ontario' is as follows:—L. Lee, Capt. and engineer; E. Anderson, Cranes; Thos. Wellesley, foreman, Albert Upper, boss dock hand, and Wm. Livingston, cook; Tug "Sir John," Wm. Drennan, Capt. David Wilcox Esq., A. Dunlap, fireman, and James Mitchell, scowman.

TOLD IN TWO LETTERS.

FROM THE SON: "23 Cedar St., New York, Oct. 28, 1882.

Gentlemen: My father resides at Glover, Vt. He has been a great sufferer from Scrofula, and the inclosed letter will tell you what a marvelous effect has had in his case. I think his blood must have contained the humor for at least ten years; but it did not show except in the form of a scrofulous sore on the wrist, until about five years ago. From a few spots which appeared at that time, it gradually spread so as to cover his entire body. I assure you he was terribly afflicted, and an object of pity, when he began using your medicine. Now, there are few men of his age who enjoy as good health as he has. I could easily name fifty persons who would testify to the facts in his case.

Yours truly, W. M. PHILLIPS."

FROM THE FATHER: "It is both a pleasure and a duty for me to state to you the benefit I have derived from the use of

Ayer's Sarsaparilla.

Six months ago I was completely covered with a terrible humor and scrofulous sores. The humor caused an itching and burning, and intolerable itching, and the skin cracked so as to cause the blood to flow in many places whenever I moved. My suffering was great, and my life a burden. I commenced the use of the Sarsaparilla in April last, and have used it regularly since that time. My condition began to improve at once. The sores have all healed, and I feel perfectly well in every respect—being now able to do a good day's work, although 73 years of age. Many inquire what has wrought such a cure in my case, and I tell them, as I have here tried to tell you, AYER'S SARSAPARILLA. Glover, Vt., Oct. 21, 1882. Yours gratefully, HIRSH PHILLIPS."

AYER'S SARSAPARILLA CURES Scrofula and all skin diseases, Eczema, Erysipelas, Eczema, Ringworm, Itch, Sores, Boils, Tumors, and Eruptions of the Skin. It clears the blood of all impurities, aids digestion, stimulates the action of the bowels, and thus restores vitality and strengthens the whole system.

THURSDAY, OCTOBER 9, 1884.

TOWN AND COUNTY.

WATERWORKS.

MUST have a bridge.

MEAGHER & Co. announce some new facts in their advertisement this week. Mrs. Dalton's fall opening of millinery is daily drawing crowds of fair visitors.

SUBSCRIPTIONS for Montreal Witness and all leading newspapers received at the TRIBUNE office.

THE stn. barge Industry with all her formidable enginery has returned to port after a successful season's work at Trenton.

THE second payment on lots bought from the Indian Department at the sale of the Reserve last year is due this month.

OUR readers will welcome the contribution of our new correspondent from Vennachar from whom they will be pleased to hear very frequently.

MR. STEWART has not yet risen to the situation or those holes in the boardwalks would, long since, have been repaired. Those unsightly crossings still disgrace the west side of St. George street.

ANOTHER CONTRACT.—Mr. James Burgess and a gang of men go out on the line of the Central Ontario railway to construct a large engine and boiler house in connection with the Coehill Mining Company's extensive works.

BARLEY.—There is not much doing yet in barley, and prices still continue very low. It will be just as well for farmers to go on with their fall ploughing and defer their sales of grain until a later day when better prices may possibly be obtained.

FOOT BALL.—The Union Jacks went down to Nanapanee last Saturday and sustained a disastrous defeat from the Young Canadians of that town, being beaten in three straight games. They assert that their competitors were too heavy for juniors like them.

SERENADE.—The Deseronto Cornet Band paid their respects to Mr. and Mrs. James D. Burgess by playing a number of selections before their residence on Dundas street. Mr. Burgess acknowledged their kind attentions by a handsome donation to the band fund.

THE HERO.—Read the advertisement of the popular steamer 'Hero' and note carefully her change of time. The rumor that she ran aground last week at Bath was incorrect as she was delayed solely by the exceedingly stormy weather which was then prevailing.

ECONOMICAL.—The Council have fixed the rate of taxation for this year at 21 mills, being one mill less on the dollar than the rate last year. This speaks well for the care and economy with which they have managed affairs this season and will be one of several powerful arguments for their re-election in January.

THE LARGEST.—There has been placed on our table a huge radish weighing seven pounds and measuring 21 1/2 and 24 inches in its respective dimensions. This monster was grown on the farm of Mr. Wm. McConnell, of the Nanapanee road, being one of many of about the same size which he has raised this season.

PRETENTIOUS CLAIMS.—It seems that not content with the honors of Crown Jewel flour, and the discovery of perpetual motion, the staff of the Deseronto Flour Mills now claim that its members constitute the best looking crowd to be found in any establishment in Deseronto outside of the TRIBUNE office. Even with that necessary reservation we fear that such claims are too pretentious by far.

PARSONAGE OPENING.—The Ladies Aid Society of the Methodist Church are busy at present preparing for a grand opening of the new parsonage which will take place about the middle of November. A large assortment of fancy articles will be on sale and various other attractions provided, and as over sixty ladies in the town have promised their co-operation, it requires very little of the gift of prophecy to predict a grand success.

Our sporting reporter informs us that he saw one of the finest collections of good fish, including twelve pike, that he ever witnessed in Deseronto. He regrets, however, to state that they were the result of a Sunday's work. The same lynch-evil collector of items witnessed a lady a Sunday or two since, marching along the street with the barrel of a shot gun sticking out from under her shawl. The ducks would catch it that day.

FOUND.—Last Thursday a rubber coat call at the TRIBUNE office.

The Reeve moves to-day into his new mansion on the Nanapanee road.

MR. L. E. MILLS, does a very large and increasing business in hardware &c., at Shannonsville.

OUR Kingston correspondent did the Midland Fair and pleasantly describes his experiences.

THE ladies of Deseronto and vicinity should note carefully Mrs. Butler's advt. in another column.

THE Lennox Fair attracted a great number of visitors from Deseronto who express themselves much pleased with the exhibits.

Milling's team of black horses which took second prize at the first quarterly fair at this place took the same position at the Great Fair at Toronto.

MACKLIN and Hampton tramped out to Kingsford and back the other afternoon in quick time, striking it is said a five mile gait on an average.

PARTIES renewing subscriptions to the Globe and Mail, or other Toronto papers, will save money by sending their orders through the TRIBUNE office.

CHRIST CHURCH.—Sunday School at Christ Church next Sunday afternoon at 2:30 and regular services, owing to thanksgiving services in morning at All Saints, will be held at 3:30 p. m.

READ very carefully in another column the advertisement of the old, reliable house of F. Donoghue & Bros. They have made heavy importation of dry goods, groceries &c., for their great fall opening.

THE RESERVE.—Mr. Dingman, accompanied by Chief Green, has been inspecting the Reserve and gathering information with a view to making some important and necessary changes in the management of Indian affairs.

OBSERVE.—The next meeting of the Deseronto Temperance Society will be held on Friday evening in Rathbun Hall. Unusual attractions provided on this occasion for which see posters. Go early and secure a seat.

THE steam barge Resolute arrived in port on Wednesday morning after a busy season's work on the upper lakes. Capt. Gowan and his crew, are glad to get back to Deseronto again and are warmly welcomed home by a host of friends.

As we go to press we learn that a social gathering is being held at the residence of Mr. C. Oliver, Dundas St. Mr. J. G. Hooper who has so acceptably labored in connection with St. Mark's Church during the past year will be presented with a purse and an address indicative of the esteem in which he has been deservedly held by the congregation. Mr. Hooper intends continuing his theological studies at Trinity College, Toronto.

ENORMOUS YIELD.—Mr. Howatt, of the Bay View farm, has probably the finest crop of potatoes grown this season in the bay district, a result of a judicious choice of the best varieties of seed. There is not the least indication of disease and the yield is enormous, careful calculation showing 450 bushels of 'Jumbos' to the acre, and the 'Beauties of Helbron' even going beyond that, giving 488 bushels to the acre. Visitors to the farm express astonishment at the size and quantity of these tubers which Mr. Howatt with so much justifiable pride exhibits.

CRICKET.—The match which had been announced to take place last week between the Pictou club and our local team has been postponed, a telegram being received from Pictou at the last moment that their team could not play on that day. A return match took place instead between the married and single members of our local club. It was most closely contested, but the cool, steady play of the old men at last carried the day. The score shows 52 and 70 for the married men, the juveniles getting 52 and 65. The winners are greatly elated over their success. On Friday our club plays a match at Nanapanee with the cricketers of that town.

HARVEST HOME.—A Harvest Home Festival will be held in St. Mark's Church on Sunday next, 12th inst. There will be a full cathedral service with Hopkins's Te Deum in G at morning prayer. It is expected that Rev. Mr. Carey, of Kingston, will be the preacher. At this and also at the evening service the collections in excess of the usual offertory will be devoted to the fund for finishing the church. It is hoped that an amount will be received sufficient to put the building in such condition as to render it suitable for holding public meetings in connection with the church. The decorations will be suitable for the occasion. It will also be Mr. Hooper's last Sunday in Deseronto for the present year.

Mrs. MIZ has arrived from Toronto; her grand military opening commences to-day; see advt.

THE churches are now rapidly filling up with young ladies anxious to show their fall bonnets.

THE trip to North Hastings by our correspondent will be perused with much interest by all our readers.

MR. TIOS, CREEPER, of Shannonsville took first prizes for boots and shoes at the Tyendinaga fair.

ALL SAINTS.—Harvest thanksgiving services will be held in All Saints Church (upper Mohawk) next Sunday at 11 a. m.

NOTICE.—The Choir of St. Mark's Church are requested to attend full rehearsals on Thursday and Saturday evenings at 7:30 o'clock, sharp.

MR. H. R. BEDFORD, intends at an early day to move his law office into Mr. Kimmerly's new house a couple of doors east of his present office.

CAUTION.—All parties are strictly cautioned against injuring the trees or trespassing on the grounds adjoining the parsonage of Christ Church. All offenders will be prosecuted according to law.

THE fair at Shannonsville last Saturday drew a large assembly from all parts of Tyendinaga and surrounding country. There was a good display of agricultural and other products. The rain in the afternoon proved a drawback and marred the pleasure considerably.

R. T. LAZIER took the first prize for cheese at Shannonsville and R. McKenny, of Milltown, also made an excellent display of the same article; J. O. LAZIER took the prize for flour; and J. C. Hanley, of Read, the first for potatoes, carrots and second for turnips.

GAS.—Mr. French is rapidly getting the gasworks into good running order, having added a number of very ingenious appliances which overcome some of the mechanical difficulties which have hitherto impeded the production of gas from sawdust. The Big Mill Cedar Mill &c., are all illuminated now by the new light, and Mr. French has introduced into the former establishment a Siemens' regenerative gas burner which throws a very brilliant light. It is of 350 or 400 candle power and effects a saving moreover of 50 per cent. over other burners. Two or three more of these burners will be introduced into the different establishments.

SERIOUS ACCIDENT.—James Fitzgerald, a recent arrival from Ireland, sustained serious injuries last Thursday morning while making his way to the Junction. His own statements were very contradictory but as he was seen a short time before the departure of the midnight train, it is conjectured that before the train started from the east end he had taken a seat on the locomotive, just above the cow-catcher, and as he had been drinking heavily, it is supposed he lost his balance and fell off. He was found early next morning by some persons who heard his cries for help and as soon as possible went into town by Mr. A. Brown, the station agent. Dr. Clinton attended to his injuries which were found to be very serious, his body being crushed, while a long, deep gash disfigured the side of his head. He stated that he had no friends in this country. Every kindness was extended to him at the O'Connor House by the proprietor and railway officials. It was thought advisable to remove him to the general hospital at Kingston, and on Saturday morning he was accordingly sent down by the Hero to that city.

BIBLE SOCIETY.

The annual meeting of the Deseronto Branch of the Upper Canada Bible Society was held in the Union Sabbath School room on Monday evening. The chair was taken by Rev. D. O. Crossley, Vice President, who opened the meeting with the usual devotional exercises. The Secretary having read the minutes of the previous meeting the financial statement for the year was presented which showed the amount collected during the past year to be $35.85 a very marked increase on former years. The various officers and committees were then appointed and the address delivered by Rev. Messrs. Crossley and Craig, and the Secretary, Rev. D. Hodgkin, of Colborne, the indefatigable agent of the Society, then gave a very eloquent and instructive address containing much valuable information concerning the U. C. Society and its great work in Ontario. Its record during the past year had amounted to $30,063 and its sphere of usefulness was always extending. He also referred to the vast and continually increasing operations of the British and Foreign Bible Society the greatest of all instrumentalities for circulating the Scriptures at home and abroad. The following are the officers for the ensuing year.—E. W. Rathbun, President; Resident Clergymen, Vice-Presidents; W. R. Aylsworth, Treasurer; S. Russell, Secretary; W. G. Eggar, Deputy Secretary; Wm. Irvine, T. Mallory, R. Geldis and I. Allum.—Standing Committee: Misses W. Mann, Bradshaw, Piggin and Annie Whitton.—Collectors.

HARVEST HOME.

Sunday last, the occasion of the first Harvest Home Festival at Madoc, was a red letter day in the history of that church, and too much credit cannot be given to those by whose assistance so great a success was achieved. The festival and of course beautiful decorations were sources of general comment, and although fruits, flowers and vegetables were in abundance
the manner in which they were arranged produced a decidedly pleasing and chaotic effect. The Gothic windows of the church were filled with the various fruits, flowers and vegetables grown in the neighborhood.
Around the pillars in the centre aisle and up to within a few feet of the ceiling the larger kinds of fruits and vegetable were suspended in pleasing profusion, while at the chancel steps, and just in front of the altar, the smaller fruits and vegetables were for their unique shapes. The entrance to the chancel was spanned by a graceful arch made of evergreens and the heads of grain, and from this arch were hung rows checked apples and large bunches of grapes.
The Communion Table was covered with a fair linen cloth, which did not conceal either the fine carving of the table itself or the chaste emblems worked in audacious relief on the front. A wreath of richly-hued maple leaves, and bunches of headed wheat and red berries, surrounded the deep carved back round from which the world's feast stood out in golden contrast to its surroundings. The beautiful music of the sublime Cathedral service was heard from the well-trained choir, produced a deep impression. At Morning Prayer there was a celebration of the Holy Communion. The reading of Hopkin's Te Deum in G was particularly fine, and reflects great credit upon the painstaking efforts of the choir, Britton, whose efforts to improve the singing have been unremitting. The sermon, which was preached by Rev. Mr.
Stanford, the pastor. The offertory at this service amounted to $25, and was devoted to the building fund. At evening prayer

the church was crowded to the utmost, many having to turn away for want of room. Mr. Hooper who returns to Trinity College, took his leave of the congregation at this service, preaching a discourse appropriate to the occasion from Gal. Chap. 1,
v. 3. As in the morning the various services were hearty and impressive.

Boys Jersey Suits from $1.75 up at the Big Store.

Shetland Shawls in all shades from 50c

Ladies should call and see the Waterproof Circulars at the Big Store.

Rubbers and Felt Overalls. The Big Store took advantage of a break in the price of Rubber and felt overalls in the United States and bought an immense quantity. The American rubbers are neater in style and finish and much more durable than the Canadian.

CRICKET.

The members of the Deseronto cricket club certainly deserve credit for their pluck and perseverance.

Though but recently organized and completely without practice, they courageously challenged the Napanee club, one of the best in central Ontario, to a friendly game, and the challenge being accepted, a match was played at Napanee last Friday in the presence of a large number of spectators.

After a very closely contested game,
the Deseronto men actually winning the first innings, victory perched on the banners of the Napanee team who won by four wickets. Deseronto first took the bat, McLeod in the first innings making 38 runs, Stoddard 13,
and Whittom 5, the total being 63.
Napanee followed with a score of 32, of which Maybee made 14. In the second innings Craig, Dalton and Leggett each made 6, the total runs being 31. For Napanee, Briggs made 15,
Maybee 9, and Leonard, not out, 19.
Noble and Allum bowled excellently for Deseronto, Burrows and Briggs doing similarly for Napanee. It was acknowledged in Napanee that with even a limited amount of practice the Deseronto team will be hard to beat.
Mr. R. H. Trimble acted as scorer.
The Deseronto team were treated with every attention and courtesy by their Napanee opponents. We append the score.

Here we supposed was where they would go to work to scuttle the bark. 'I wish I had my tools here,' said the carpenter. 'What good would they do you — would you scuttle the bark now?' asked the cook. 'No,' says the carpenter, 'but I could cut a hole in the plank here and get one of us to crawl through, and then after getting to the boat, then he could bring her around here, and we could all climb out into her and escape.' Bay of Quinte Canning Factory.

To the Editor of The Tribune.

Dear Sir—Your correspondent has experienced no greater pleasure in a long time than was afforded him last week while looking through the large canning factory of Boulter & Dunning at Picton. I had no idea of the magnitude of this establishment, and to tell you that I feel proud of the business done there, but feel free to express my feeling. This arises not only from the fact that the firm is progressive and gaining a world wide reputation, but mainly because it affords us farmers an excellent opportunity to raise large quantities of profitable produce for a really good price. The large quantities of tomatoes, peas, and corn, contracted for yearly would astonish any one, and the large amount paid to producers must make a wonderful difference to the farmers of Prince Edward. The rotation necessary to follow in producing those crops has a great influence for good on the soil, as it is superior to a bare fallow, and unlike the latter system it gives immediate return without any loss to succeeding crops. That it is highly profitable to farmers is easily proven when we look at the immense amount of money paid out yearly for crops never before grown in the locality. I started out with the intention of giving you a slight idea of the business operations of this factory, but being a farmer myself I could not resist a few remarks on the portion of the business of main interest to farmers. But as I often notice newspaper editors call attention to the benefits of advertising, and thus filling their own pockets, it is but natural to expect you to give a little "self" in others. This factory has shipped car load lots of canned evaporated apples to London, England, Glasgow, Scotland, and Liverpool, and now working on a large order for Australia, not to speak of large orders to the United States. They shipped one order to the latter country last fall amounting to over $14,000. When we look at the fruit sections of California and the name her fruit bears as to quality, it seems to me that two things work together favorably to permit the Bay of Quinte to compete with the whole world. The first is that Messrs. Boulter & Dunning use the best improved machinery, great diligence to put out uniformly good goods, and spare no pains or expense to put up prime stock in the cleanest possible way. The second item is, that this section must be especially favorable for growing apples, berries, and all other fruits and vegetables of superior high flavor. There can be no doubt of this as I am credibly informed that the "Lion Brands" from the Bay of Quinte Canning Factory are rated second to none in England, and I know they are not inferior to the best manufactured in California. I know this because my father had charge of one of the largest fruit plantations and canning and drying establishments in El Dorado county, California, from where he shipped me yearly a large lot of their most canned and dried fruits. Therefore this section must be especially adapted to this business. I was shown over in car load lots for nearly all the chief cities in Canada, and also orders from some of our leading aristocratic families for their yearly supplies, ranging all the way from canned chicken to pickled pears. The factory employ about 140 hands, all under the management of a professional in the business, and all constantly re-trained by a head foreman for each department who is well paid to see that it is done cleanly and carefully. I was especially struck with the great stress put on doing all the work in a clean manner. I noticed where the apples were peeled and cured for the evaporating process that each apple afterwards passed through three persons' hands to make sure that no specks or portions of the core remained on or in the apples. Then again in the process of canning tomatoes, I found them thrown into a large colander or perforated pan to allow the liquid to drain off so that the cans would be filled with tomatoes and not full of liquid as many brands are. Perhaps this plan explains the fact that they can pay good prices to farmers for their goods and receive from $8 to 20 per cent more than other brands. Their goods are put on the market; in fact they are never put on the market, for they are behind with their orders and are not contented to accept low offers for their goods. The manufacturing of their own boxes, cases, cans, &c., is in itself a large business, using annually over 20,000 cases of tin and 10 tons of solder. Visitors are impressed with the perfect system found everywhere, with the great cleanliness of everything and the knowledge shown by each laborer in his department regarding the details of his special branch. I find the farmers of Prince Edward very jubilant over the success of this firm as it means an average from seventy-five to one hundred thousand dollars in cash annually to the men who produce the stock, and I also find that it gives the farmers better thoughts regarding their profession, showing as it does the probabilities within the reach of thrifty, thinking agriculturists. They find that improved methods, thorough cultivation and good seed will give dollars where shillings used to be, and the only extra expense is the first or starting cost. As one of the many farmers here I wish Messrs. Boulter & Dunning increased prosperity, fully merited by their close attention and enterprising ambition to serve in their business.

Mr. O'Brien, the contractor, is hurrying forward construction work and will put on another lift of gravel in some sections. A party of fifty Italians went back last week to work in the gravel pit.

Arrangements have been completed for the immediate carriage of the mails on the different trains, thus ensuring good mail service for the back country.

The work of putting up poles and stretching wires for a telegraph service has commenced.

Each village is ready to maintain that its station is the prettiest and most convenient on the line.

There is a universal desire that the missing link between Tamworth and Bridge-water should be at once constructed.

Union Sabbath School.

The Superintendent of the Union Sabbath School announced last Sunday morning at the close of the exercises that the time had at last arrived for discontinuing the sessions of the school. He stated that as the various churches had established schools of their own, there was now no necessity for such a school. It was with the deepest regret that he made this announcement, when he remembered that for twenty-two years it had existed, doing its work quietly and he trusted effectually. It had for years furnished a bond of union between the different religious bodies, and he had no doubt that the blessing of God had followed the efforts of teachers in their humble efforts to impart instruction. Although a step backwards, he yielded to the opinions of the majority of teachers and others who desired to unite themselves with schools connected with the different churches. We have no doubt that old residents of Deseronto and people formerly connected with the village, but now scattered all over the continent, will learn with regret that this useful institution now ceases to exist. It was established in an old school house, the first superintendent being Mr. Jas. Bishop. He was succeeded by E. W. Rathbun, Esq. who ever took a deep interest in its welfare. It is with no ordinary regret that we conclude the fact of the dissolution of such an organization for good as the dear old Union Sabbath School of Deseronto.

AYER'S

restores, with the gloss and freshness of youth, faded or gray hair to a natural, rich brown color, or deep black, as may be desired.

By its use light or red hair may be darkened, thin hair thickened, and baldness often,

though not always, cured.

It checks falling of the hair, and stimulates a weak and sickly growth to vigor. It prevents and cures scalp and dandruff, and heals nearly every disease peculiar to the

A STRANGE DECEPTION.
Gertie Fuller, the Woman's Wife, Man

AN EFFEMINATE-LOOKING COUNTRYMAN. She was about 30 years old. After living in Wisconsin for several months Dubois met her at a social gathering. Looking for a husband, Edna's father, who was a member of the responsible middle class, had been disappointed in a wide living in the outskirts of the village. After a short courtship the couple married. Dubois was a young man, tall, with the bride's mother. A few weeks after the wedding it began to be whispered around that the groom was a "freak" and that his tongue was green. The news spread, and in a few weeks the leading papers of the country contained the story of the marriage. Dubois' looks and his peculiar phrase were discussed in their editorial columns. Dubois and "his pretty young wife" studied the stores, and Dubois' mother, who had been a frequent visitor and newspaper correspondent, decided they had to leave the town, which they did at the dawn of light, going to a small town in the north. Dubois was a young man living under an assumed name. At last Mr. Fuler took the case, and decided to find out for herself whether her daughter was a "freak."

invoked the aid of officers and followed the couple, overtaking them at a Brandon hotel. She induced them to return to Wausau, where they remained for a few days, at the sight of her several months. Haddon heard of the case, and after making an investigation, he ascertained that F and D were together. He then called on them. Then he began searching for the quarry, matched the couple. After considerable trouble he discovered the whereabouts of the fugitives. The woman proved to be the missing Mrs. Haddon. She refused to return with her husband, and at first, but upon being told that she would be a "free wife" and return to her abandoned home and her four children. Gertie Fuller returned to her home in Wausau, and the fugitives continued to live a few days ago. She refused to talk to outsiders about her marriage and continued to live in the same home and later on returned to their former place of residence in Illinois. Last fall Gertie Fuller became pregnant, and it was said that the child was Doolin was the child's father. The strange case has never been explained satisfactorily and all kinds of theories have been advanced as to the reasons for the flight of the fugitives. The astronomical marriages on record. The last chapter was enacted at Chetum, a small town in the state of Yucatan, Mexico, where Gertie Fuller Doolin was married to a man named Lehman, and they have gone to Maine, Wis., where they will in future chevalier, generally known as Madam, D'Éon, was born of good family at Tenarre, in France, in 1728. D'Éon was a man of brilliant parts, a writer by no means contemptible on various subjects, an accomplished diplomat and a brave officer, and at one period he was minister plenipotentiary to the Court of Gauchy, who succeeded him as ambassador, was assigned as a reason for his not returning to France, but, it is probable, that the real cause of his stay in England was his acting as the private agent of Louis XV., by whom he was allowed a pension. D'Éon continued to reside in London for fourteen years, and was generally known as the most distinguished female spy. Rumours, at first faint, but gradually acquiring strength, said VERDICT WAS IN CONSEQUENCE GIVEN) for the plaintiff; but it was afterwards set aside on a point of law. After this trial M. de Vergennes, one of the French Ministers, wrote a letter which he wrote to D'Eon, in which he said that the king's will that he "should assume the dress of his sex"—meaning the dress of a woman—and this injunction was repeated on the king's death by Louis XVI. and by the Emperor, and at the end of his long life D'Eon dressed and was looked upon as one of the softer sex. Early in the French revolution he fled to England, and remained there till his decease in 1810. Death proved the folly of those who forced him into petticoats, for his manhood was plain to be seen, and he was examined by the examination of the body. Why he was metamorphosed, and why he continued to acquiesce in the change, when he might have assumed the manly dress, there appears to be no means of discovering.

in the countries where the Minister of War is always a General, the Minister of Marine an Admiral, the Minister of Agriculture a General or, at the least, an officer, the Minister of Finance, etc., the advent of every new Ministry is the signal for hasty, costly changes in all departments. Even in the army, where, sometimes, simple professional experience is all that counts, the Minister, in the person of a General, comes to his work with his mind full of crochets, and thinks he has to do his duty by the Minister's orders, without abolishing something and setting up something else. In England a man of talent, who has been in the army for many years and has fought in many campaigns, and who is brave and skilful as an independent member, is quickly gets sobered when he is set to work in the difficult work of managing a Ministry. He is not a Minister, and he must rely at first upon his permanent staff, and this prevents him from attempting to do anything that is not in accordance with the acquired experience, whatever reforms may see fit to propose will be mounted on a pedestal of imprudence, and a prudent spirit, and are more or less of a hindrance to the work of the Ministry. It is certainly a pity that a Minister with great abilities should be turned out of office as a consequence of his being so appreciated; but under our English system services of a statesman who goes into opposition are not lost to the country, for he is free to do his own work, and to do the work of his successors; or besides which there is a departmental etiquette which prevents a Minister from leaving his office to carry on and complete good work commenced by his predecessor. Two or three little facts will show how harmonious the working of the English Ministry is to the mechanism of Government in doing order, despite their struggles for power. An incoming Ministry is always ready to acknowledge the services of the outgoing Ministry, and to pay them the compliment, which it puts him in possession of all the facts about current business to be transacted. In this acknowledgement the Minister takes care to put the whole of his stay in office to take care that his predecessor shall the department which may be made. Thus, if important news arrived abroad, a copy of the dispatch would be forwarded at once by the present Foreign Secretary to the former holder of the office. The idea of this being that the latter, as ex-officio of the Indian policy of the Government, has a claim to be supplied with the same and rapid information. These back courtesies are not practised in any other country, and one may allude to them with pleasure as showing that—they have so worked the result in duty, as we have shown, to the wisdom in siding with native party and the wisdom in siding with the Ministry with most of her Ministers, so no jealousy could arise among them. The Ministers who were the friends of Ministers whom he disliked unflinchingly by questioning them about the affairs of the department and the conduct of their agents. This would be a great advantage to the country. It is always open to an ill-natured sovereign; but must be remembered again that the Queen has granted her Majesty for exerting her prerogative in correspondence with foreign rulers is not a subject which has been constantly has been, to serve Ministers of her party who happened to want it. The Queen might have refused to do so, but she has granted it. Ministers at that time, and she would have had constituents who wanted for so doing some Ministers who were not in the Ministry. terrible scene in the oil country recalled by a recent calamity.

“For some true result of good
All parties work together,”

The announcement of the death of W. Riley, at Saylorsville, O., recalls the terrible causality in the history of petroleum development in this country of which disaster he was the last suffering victim. It left him a blind and feeble cripple, and subject at times to insanity during which he seemed to suffer all the agonizing experiences through which he passed on the day of that great disaster, twenty-three years

April, 1861, there was a cluster of yielding from one hundred to three hundred barrels of oil a day, on the then small tract of land owned by the late Perry and Merriek sank a well to the depth of two hundred feet, but as the small earth they took out the pumps, the water was not raised. The next morning, about 5 o'clock in the afternoon of April 16, the drill had gone to a depth of nearly a hundred feet, when it struck a vein of oil and gas, and instantly the oil began to flow out of the hole at a bubbling, hurling the tools high in the air and gushing upon a fountain fifty feet high. This was the first flowing well ever struck in the region. The great excitement that followed the discovery of a mile around, and in a few minutes a fountain of oil was surrounded crowd of excited men, women, and children. The well was spouting at the rate of about 100 barrels a day, and the roaring mass of oil the gas rose so high as to be visible as a cloud at fifty feet high. As soon as the oil began to gush forth all the fires of the neighborhood were kindled, and the men here had been no preparation for such an unexpected as unprecedented and unexpected rush of oil, and in a few minutes a stream of fire was running in streams in all directions. Cans were built and filled with the collected oil, and the oil was being wasted, and in a short time a fire surrounded the derrick.

to Riley, then a young man who lived at the scene of the excitement, back, from Meadowville. He was to the father of a family, and the daughter of a farmer who lived on creek, near the Harley & Merrick Riley went with his prospective in-law and joined the crowd at the nature of petroleum gas was then known, and while the crowd stood with no thought of danger, the gas he spouting well was slowly spreading. It was no fire nearer than a quarter of a mile to the well. That was the boiler of a well then drilling. By seven o'clock, evening the gas from the well had blown out the boiler. At eight in a second, the whole air was filled with a crash and roar like the blowing of a field of artillery. The gas, blowing in a strong wind, was falling back to the ground, rising a hundred feet around, in place of boiling oil. Instantly the ground covered with flames. A scene of indescribable horror. The houses were thrown to the ground by the explosion and surrounded by the burning. It seethed on every side, while the gas roared above them. The most terrible scene was witnessed. Men were thrown with their lives, but were horrified. At the time of the explosion, everything in the neighborhood within a distance of a quarter of a mile was destroyed. The houses, barns, houses, and dwellings, were all wrapped in flames. The boiler at well, eighty rods from the original blow up with a tremendous explosion, was the only one left standing. At this time the whole air was hot. The jet of oil, rushing up from the well, was a pillar of living fire, while the gas, blowing in a strong wind, fell back to the ground, rising a hundred feet, was flashing and roaring. A terrific electrical display during the storm. The sounds of the explosion were almost continuous, and the flames were everywhere. The houses were hurled. The heat of the fire intense that no one could approach within 150 feet of the limits of the

Among those who were prostrated by the explosion of gas was the young Wallace Riley. He succeeded in getting on his feet, and being fortunately a few steps from the outer edge of the fire circle, he made his way through the burning oil, and fell, all ablaze, just at the limit. He was seized by a man who plunged him into a hoghead tank, extinguishing the fire, and carried to a neighboring shanty.

he left $100,000 to the poor of Warren county, and he died before he could acknowledge and sign the document.

Besides Mr. Rouse, twelve dead bodies were taken from the flames before they were entirely destroyed. Of these only six could be recognized—the brothers Walker, two leading oil men of Clarion county; Wesley Skinner, of Watsburg; John Stevens, Judd Mason, and Albert Galt. Twelve men, who are known to have been in the spot, strangers sight-seeing in the oil region, were believed to have been among the victims of the disaster, as they could not be found and were never heard of afterward. Thirty-four men were rescued, as Wallace Riley was, but their injuries were so great that twenty-two of them died.

The scene at the height of the fire is described as having been the most frightful and at the same time the grandest spectacle ever witnessed. The flow of oil continued unabated for months, and as no human power could extinguish the flames it continued burning furiously. The well finally gradually exhausted itself, and the fire was at last conquered. Hundreds of thousands of barrels of oil were consumed, and the well which would have been an enormous fortune to its owners ruined them.

Wallace Riley was burned in almost exactly the same manner as the unfortunate Mr. Rouse had been. For weeks his sufferings were intense, and he constantly begged to be put to death. He was the only man to be hanged for whom he was to have married on that terrible evening was his constant thought during all his suffering. His life was a torment, and he was weak and without hands, while his face was terribly disfigured, and his lower limbs were fleshless and drawn out of shape. His sufferings were so great that although he recovered in a great measure his mental powers, he was subject to frequent lapses, which lasted sometimes for weeks at a time, and he was continually about the horrors of the scene at the burning well. It was during one of these paroxysms that he died, apparently without any suffering, and was buried for twenty-two years by a brother. The young woman to whom Riley had been engaged to be married died within a few days after the burning of the Phaethon, Rem.

A London paper calls attention to the London paper calls attention to the fact that the railway companies are now studying to provide for the comfort of passengers instead of trying to secure more gorgeous accommodations and greater speed. This subject should receive the attention of railway managers in this country. The fact that the improvements in cars, railway travel is so very uncomfortable. The time of leaving and arrival of trains running between great cities is often very inconvenient. For example, some of the trunk lines from Chicago to New York leave at about 10:30 a. m. and arrive at about 5 in the afternoon and arrive at about the same hour in the morning. Persons who leave home at the hour named go without supper. Perhaps the train stops twenty minutes at refreshments at some unimportant station and takes a single meal-eating-hour. If this is the case, half of this time is occupied by the passengers going from the train to the dining room, in waiting to be served, and in returning to the train. The time does not add up sufficient time in which to eat a single meal. Five or even six in the morning is a very inconvenient time in which to arrive in a great city. Especially is this the case if the passenger is a stranger. He does not know where to go for a good general emergency of "hot" runners. There is no opportunity of transacting business for at least three or four hours. To avoid discomfort, it is generally necessary to go to a hotel in a carriage, and best of expedients is to go to a hotel in a carriage. The speed of the train is no gain to the traveler. It is in fact a loss in both time and money. The proper time for arriving in a large city in the morning is when public conveyances are running for trips, and the stores are open for business.

A case of cremation has occurred at stayed under very remarkable circumstances. A rich Indian, the Rajah Bains, who had returned from a suite of 50 came early to the Hotel des Bains, scared by the cholera. He died of an anthrax, carbuncle, rather suddenly. His friends were so shocked by the death of a man with such titles, that they were very embarrassed, telegraphed to Paris for instructions, and an authorization was obtained for the public to be present in order to see the unusual spectacle. In the morning the corpse was laid out on the sands at the foot of one of the great white cliffs, and the funeral was continued, burning of the morning. There were scarcely any visitors except the naive friends of the deceased and some fishermen, who were gathered to see the unusual spectacle of which they were witnesses. A few days, when the incineration was complete, the ashes were divided into three portions. One was given to the Rajah's family, another, a third placed in a vase to be sent to relatives in India.

A Venetian Wedding Day.
Venetian festival is a synonym of "all

From magnificent and romantic. From the earliest history the fete has been one of the greatest popular interest and has been frequently the subject of the artist's brush. It is frequently depicted the memory of some triumph of the Venetian army, and the patriotism of the people is thus kept alive by the sight of the Venetian flag as well as by the recollections of commercial importance and power.

For centuries the Marian festivals were the most important holidays of the year. It is a custom introduced early in the tenth century to select from the different parades the most beautiful and noblest women for virtue and beauty, who were provided with dowry at the cost of the State, fitted out with wedding treasures from the Treasury of St. Mark. The girls were dressed in long robes of white, with loosened air interwoven with threads of gold, and in a rich golden crown.

St. Peter, followed by a cortege richly decorated gondolas, with music singing, the Doge and Signory accompanying, the bridegroom and his friends, each hand a small box containing her dowry, met her appointed husband in the church. Mass was celebrated, and the official religious ceremony was the beginning of the fete, which lasted a whole week. With the growth of luxury and the change of the social character, and it became necessary to limit its observance, and during the seven-year war, in the fourteenth century, it fell into disuse.

An incident which happened in the tenth century during the observance of the festival has been preserved in a poem, and illustrates to well the spirit of the day and the isolation of the republic to be omitted here. The Trieste poet, in the poem, depicts the Venetian State, with its treasures, both human and monetary, and one fine morning of St. Mark's eve the Venetian Republic was surprised, surrounded the congregation and rescued the brides and treasures. The bride, who was present, rushed immediately to the altar, and the wedding ceremony was managed and put to sea in the next haste. Venice rose as one man to the pursuit of the pirates, and the pirates of the Venetians was overtaken and beaten off, and the pirates were driven off the coast, such was the fury of the chase. The brides were recovered entire, and the Venetians were able to replace them with increased pomp the same

TOWN AND COUNTY.

FINE weather for fall ploughing.
PUMPKIN pies and husking bees are the go.

BOOKWORM flapjacks will soon be up to the "scratch."
A carter boom in job work at THE TRIBUNE office these days.

A YOUNG man named Dettlor was seriously stabbed last Saturday at Tanworth.

GAS.—The streets have been illuminated by sawdust gas during the past week, a pleasing improvement these dark nights.

The Village Clerk inserts an important notice in our advertising columns to which the attention of all ratepayers is directed.

Mr. James D. Burgess and crew left for Coddell on Tuesday afternoon. They expect to be absent about six weeks at that place.

WHEN the northern breezes begin to blow, and we commence to get the snow, won't it be nice to go, in the evening to the show, with our best girl on our arm—just so.

THE readers of THE TRIBUNE will peruse Mr. Mallory's interesting letter with no ordinary pleasure. He gives a vivid description of the country and the customs of the Indians of that vicinity.

Mr. Charles Dryden and a crew of men started this week for Oswego to construct some more docks at that city, a mission much more pleasant than that on which they set out in the same direction this time last year.

A man named Dolofes was arrested by Chief Gynouy for being drunk and disorderly, on Wednesday morning, and when brought before Mr. Aylsworth was given 30 minutes to depart for a more congenial clime.

ENORMOUS YIELD.—Mr. Samuel Croft, gardener for H. B. Rathbun, Esq., has succeeded in raising from a plot of land measuring about one-fifth of an acre the immense quantity of 12½ tons of mangel wurtzel beets. This beats the record.

MR. WATSON's night school is rapidly filling up. It would not be amiss for the school board to employ Mr. Watson to teach a night school at which boys unable to attend the day school might receive instruction during winter evenings free of charge.

TEACHERS CONVENTION.—The teachers of the Public Schools departed on Thursday morning to attend the teachers convention at Belleville. The deliberations of such a body should result in a really needed boon to the cause of education in South Hastings.

MR. HOWATT, of Bay View, still continues to add to his immense stock of potatoes, the yield still keeping up. There are no indications of disease. His large field of fall cabbage is now a sight; one of the cabbages raised by him weighs 17½ lbs. He has a ditcher hard at work these days at draining operations.

THE pleasant event at Peterson's Ferry recorded in these columns under the proper heading was witnessed by a large party of friends. THE TRIBUNE was not forgotten on the auspicious occasion, a fact of which the receipt of a large slice of bridal cake is the best evidence. The happy couple have our best wishes.

CHEMICAL WORKS.—The Rathbun Company have given a contract to Mr. James R. Booth for the erection of a large purifying house for the manufacture of acid and tar. The building will be of brick with an iron roof and its size 28x40 feet. A charcoal shed has been erected south of the gas works, and other improvements are in progress.

SUNDAY SCHOOL.—A Sunday School in connection with the Presbyterian congregation will be organized next Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock in the Union Sabbath School room. All children connected with the congregation as well as those not members of other schools are cordially invited to be present on the occasion.

HAVE you tried that "Cider" that Geddis brought over from Prince Edward.

THE TRIBUNE until the end of 1885 for one dollar. A good time now to renew your subscription.

LARGE numbers of cattle have been going over the Grand Trunk of late to Montreal for shipment to Europe.

DR. IRISH, whose reputation as a skilled dentist is so widely known, has his practice in Deseronto steadily increasing.

TELEPHONIC communication will be established immediately between the central office and the Reeve's mansion on the Napanee road.

THE general meet of the American Canoe Association will take place next year at Grindstone Island, near Gananoque, the same place at which it was held last summer.

PARTIES desiring cheap, handsome and substantially bound copies of the Scriptures will find it to their advantage to call on Mr. Egar, depositary of the Bible Society.

HISTORIC FACT.—James E. Bowen, Esq., postmaster of Deseronto, very kindly brought us in a number of large apples, excellent in quality, grown on the historic U. E. Loyalist tree to which previous reference has been made in our columns.

EXPENSIVE CARS.—The Grand Trunk is building two magnificent cars at the Point St. Charles works at Montreal to replace those destroyed by the Peckering accident. They are built of Mahogany instead of walnut, will have smoking rooms, and cost each $18,000.

HICKORY NUTS.—The raids on hickory nuts have commenced. On Friday last Mr. C. E. Hubbs visited Carman's Point and returned home with three large bags of excellent samples. When properly dried, cracked and shelled he will report progress at THE TRIBUNE office.

THE RESERVE.—Mr. Dingwall, Inspector of Indian Agencies, in his recent tour of inspection found that a number of tenants had not complied with the terms of their lease. Such parties will be refused a renewal. The council sits in a few days to consider applications and release portions of the reserve.

TUG SHERWOOD.—The remains of the tug Sherwood recently destroyed by fire have been raised from their watery bed and brought to Deseronto. They were hauled up on the marine railway and the hull broken up. The engine, boiler etc., not being much damaged will be utilized in a new boat.

RETURNED.—Mr. and Mrs. W. L. Roberts returned home from their wedding tour last Saturday afternoon. On Monday evening they received a number of friends at Christ Church parsonage. The evening was passed most enjoyably by all present. The happy couple left yesterday for their new home in the west.

THE people of Deseronto will all be well pleased to learn that Mr. D. R. McKee has effected suitable arrangements with his creditors, and that he will resume his business at the old stand. His stock of goods is very varied and extensive and intending purchasers will find it to their advantage to give him a call before going elsewhere.

AT the meeting of the mission board of the Methodist church held in Kingston, Dr. Sutherland, general secretary, stated in his report that $160,000 had been subscribed for missions last year, and that the church entered this year free from debt. There is a general determination to accomplish even greater things this year. We hope to hear next week that Deseronto has doubled its contributions.

CHARIVARI.—Every resident of the town was just going to bed or had just fallen to sleep last Monday evening, when the crash of a cannon, followed by the clanging of bells announced the commencement of an old fashioned charivari. A little nonsense now and then is relished by the best of men; but on this occasion the limits of a fun were passed, and unfortunately some acts of rowdiness followed, property being damaged and other improprieties committed. This is to be regretted. It will be remembered that a few years ago some serious and fatal results followed such proceedings in some sections of this province, which elicited unqualified expressions of disapproval from the press of Ontario. It was then thought that the Charivari would become a thing of the past. A serene, or good humored display of any kind, is all very well so long as amusement does not degenerate into license.

THE members of the Deseronto Cornet Band authorize us to emphatically deny the statement that they had anything whatever to do with the recent charivari.

MAN was made to mourn. No sooner does the cholera begin to subside in Italy and France, than an outbreak of matrimonial fever follows in Deseronto and other unhappy communities. What is our board of health doing?

FINED.—The case of Catherine Maracle vs. Moses Maracle, charging in assault at the Indian Reserve, was brought before the police magistrate of Belleville last Saturday morning, and the defendant fined $1 and costs which amount to $15.

CONCERT.—A concert under the auspices of the choir will be given in the Methodist church next Wednesday evening, 22nd inst., at 7:30 o'clock. An excellent programme has been arranged for the occasion which has for its object the purchase of new music books for the choir, any balance beyond that going to the Sabbath school purposes. There should therefore be a full house. Tickets only 10 cents.

BLUE RIBBON.—The Deseronto Temperance Society held a very successful meeting on Friday evening, 10th inst., the programme as published being carried out successfully to the letter. Speeches were given by Mr. M. W. Britton and others which evoked much enthusiasm. The following officers were elected for the ensuing term:—J. W. Bradbeer, President; A. Parham, V. P.; Mrs. J. W. Bradbeer, Treasurer; Robert Northmore, Secretary. A meeting for members only was held last evening.

METHODIST MISSIONS.—Missionary sermons will (D. V.) be preached in the Methodist Church, Deseronto, on Sabbath next Oct 19th. In the morning by Rev. M. L. Pearson of Napanee and in the evening by Rev. I. P. Wilson B. A. of Napanee. On Monday evening following, the regular missionary meeting will be held in the Church when addresses will be given by the above Rev. Gentlemen and others. Collection and Subscriptions will be taken on Monday evening in the interest of missionary work.

RAILWAY EXTENSION.—The work of construction on the N. T. & Q. Ry. as far as Tanworth will soon be completed. There is a great desire for the extension of the line to Bridgewater to afford connection with the C. P. R. and other systems, and at the same time bring Napanee and Deseronto in communication with the rich townships of Central and North Hastings, &c. The people of Elzevir and Hungerford are awake to the necessity of such a connection which would be to them so highly advantageous. They are preparing to do their part to ensure the success of the undertaking.

ACCIDENTS.—On Monday afternoon Mr. F. G. Jenkins while attending to some duties in the vicinity of the new dry kilns happened to fall and strike against a piece of timber, resulting in the fracture of one of the bones of his leg. The fracture was subsequently reduced by Dr. Clinton, and Mr. Jenkins is, we are glad to say, getting on well. On the same day Mr. Sidney Cronk, while working in the Cedar Mill, received a painful wound, caused by a bolt flying from the saw. He was attended by Dr. Newton, who reports him progressing favorably.

THE demonstration at the Murray canal on the occasion of the laying of the corner stone of one of the new bridges proved quite successful. The members of the Dominion Cabinet, who were present delivered eloquent addresses which were well received by all present. Hon. Mr. Bowell in an admirable speech recounted the different facts in connection with the early history of the undertaking which was first mooted in 1796. The ministers considered, after a careful inspection, that the route finally adopted is the correct one. The work will be pushed through with all speed, and it is expected will be completed in two years.

MR. HOWATT, of Bay View Farm, favors our readers this week with an interesting letter referring to what he saw during a recent visit to Boulter & Dunning's cannery factory at Picton. This company is justly securing a world wide reputation for the superiority of its goods. At the recent East Hastings fair the display of fruit was one of the marked features of the exhibition, it being pronounced by competent critics as something superior. All these facts incite us to again urge the business men and capitalists of Deseronto to consider the advisability of starting a similar establishment at Deseronto which is particularly well situated to become the seat of such a desirable industry.

John Soley is in the northern townships hunting deer. He sent home two fine specimens last week, showing he has met with some success.

Large flocks of wild geese have been moving South of late, an indication of an early winter. A few flocks of snow were seen west of the town Friday last.

Mr. J. J. Tilley, inspector of Model Schools, was in town last week and delivered a lecture in the town hall on the value of a good school education. The educational institutions of the town appear to be in a prosperous condition. Our High School passed a greater number of students at the summer examinations than any similar school in Ontario.

The County Fair postponed the competition of driving horses owing to the rainstorm on the first day of the fair 8th inst. until Saturday last, when a good many turned out to see the various classes on exhibition. The prizes for the best driving by a lady called quite an excitement as the horses were pretty fast and quite evenly matched. Miss Emma Vanclue, of Pictou, won 1st prize for best lady driver, and Mrs. Gilbert Hall of Bloomington, and Benjamin Story won 1st prize for 3 year old colt in roadster class, his colt showing remarkable speed for a 3 year old.

SHANNONVILLE.

The schooner Jessie McDonald cleared from Lazier's storehouse a few days since with 2000 bushels of barley. The balance of her cargo was taken at Belleville and Deseronto. The prices at present are so low that there is no inducement to the farmer to leave his fall ploughing and other work to market his produce, as that can be attended to when the season closes up.

When there is a general movement of grain the season will prove to be about an average.

Harvest Thanksgiving services were held in the Trinity Church of this village on Sabbath last. The church was beautifully decorated for the occasion, and the offerings liberal. Even in the scarcity of money, the heart of the faithful pastor might be made glad, and his larger replenished out of the abundance with which a bountiful Providence has blessed the people.

The revival services continue with unabated interest in the Methodist Church, the church being crowded every night.

Mr. W. L. Roberts, and his beautiful young bride returned to his father's on Thursday, after a prolonged bridal trip to New York, and on Friday left for his home in the West.

Mr. John Smith, of the rear concessions, was arrested yesterday by Mr. Allan Steele, for forgery, and safely lodged in jail at Belleville early this morning. It seems that this arrest has been in contemplation for some time, and successfully accomplished at last.

VENNAOCHAR.

(From our own Correspondent.)

Again I take my pen in hand. To let you know I am a man.

After having a talk with a man not far from here, I am fully persuaded, and I always believe there is such a thing as "untruth." Our conversation was about guns, and as a natural consequence each man bragged on his own gun. I said I had followed up hunting considerable, and always found my gun to prove true, both in shooting up and down hills. I recalled to mind an instance where I had shot around a hill and killed a deer. Of course I meant I had shot and the ball had struck nothing but a "round hill," and that sometime afterward I killed a deer. Cole took a wrong conception of what I said. He also thought I was getting to the front in telling lies, and consequently he began to brag. He said when I was a boy I lived with my father near a large beaver meadow, and in fly time, when the weather was very hot and the flies very numerous, I used to take my double-barrelled gun and go out in the meadow to shoot deer. Well, one very hot day I shot a deer at no great distance from me, that fore I could get where it was, it was spoiled, and the smell was something terrible. So I finally resolved to load one barrel of my gun with salt and shot. I shot the deer, with the ball, I would then shoot the salt into him, to prevent the meat from spoiling till he was reached. This I did to, for my gun would shoot so far, I said good-bye, and drove off. I have since sent for a leather medal for him. I saw Cole a few days afterwards and he said that his gun was well. I laughed and that was all he said. He was engaged in cutting marsh hay that had been badly frozen. I told him that was a very good idea, and he said Scott, that will be better than a snow bank to feed in the winter. Cole said, "I would be money in your pocket if you would make shingles and sell them, you could then feed the shavings and that would be as good as the hay. Well, he told me to skin and you get skinned. A grand tea meeting was held last Saturday evening in the new church at Instatavation and an excellent time was experienced.

Mr. James Johnson, of Griffith, was a guest of Mr. P. A. Scott, a few days. Mr. Gillmore, foreman of McLean, paid a flying visit to Mr. George Sweetman—I mean his daughter of course.

Deseronto Cornet Band.

The Deseronto Cornet Band still continues to increase in public favor and to receive cordial support on every side. They have been since their formation unwearied in their efforts to improve their playing, and by constant practice have met with deserved success. They have been making a series of serene tone, and it is pleasing to learn that in every case they have been well received and generously treated. On Thursday evening, 16th inst., they marched to the residence of the Reeve on the Napane road, where having played a number of selections, they were invited inside the hospitable mansion and served with a beautiful service of refreshments by Mr. and Mrs. Aylsworth. They had a most pleasant time. The Reeve in a short address said that the Corporation had not power legally to give them a grant, a fact which he regretted. He was glad to testify to the marked progress they had made and hoped to hear of continued improvement. Before leaving he made a generous contribution to the Uniform fund. The following amounts have been received for this fund:—H. B. Rathburn, Esq., $10.00; T. Brown, $1.00; R. Crook, $2.00; W. Brown, $2.00; M. Donohue, $5.00; J. Cameron, $3.00; P. O'Connor, $5.00; W. Kirk, $5.00; J. Nolan, $4.00; W. Irvine, $5.00; J. W. Dexter, $3.00; J. McCullough, $5.00; Rev. T. Stanton, $5.00; Jas. Wilson, $2.00; John Macdonald, $5.00; Jas. Burgess, $5.00; C. Oliver, $3.00; F. Donohue & Bros., $5.00; W. H. Aylsworth, Esq., $10.00; W. Roberts, $5.00; Rev. E. H. M. Baker, $2.50; R. H. Trimble, $3.00; Foresters, $1.20; R. N. Irvine, $1.00; A. Snider, $1.00; Social, Concerts, &c. $62.75. Total, $167.49.

SAYING GOOD-BYE.

We clip the following from the Kingston Wing:—"A jovial company met last evening in Old Sam's restaurant and for several hours spent a merry time. The occasion was a 'farewell' to Mr. Charles Doherty, who was for two years engaged in the employment of the Rathburn Agency here. His removal to Deseronto created a surprise, but it evidenced that he was advancing in the esteem of his employers, and therefore his friends agreed to give him a proper send off. The spread in the private dining hall was very complete. Everything suited the appetite admirably. The supper was sufficient to throw everybody into good humor, hence songs and speeches which followed were exceedingly felicitous, though regret was expressed on all sides at the departure of one who had so sympathetically 'stood in with the boys.' During the evening Mr. Doherty was brought to his feet in consequence of the presentation to him of a nicely worded address and a pretty scarf pin. Mr. Allan Chadwick performed the duties of chairman and during the evening claimed the chief attention of the company, while Capt. R. A. Crawford, Ald. Ellsbee, Staff-Sergeant, Lead-on Messrs. J. Crawford, J. G. Elliott, A. Hopkins, J. Livingston, R. Reid and G. Briley made brief addresses. In leaving Kingston Mr. Doherty takes with him the best wishes of his many friends."

Though numerous causes may operate to turn the hair gray, all that is needed to keep the hair in its natural color is Hall's Vegetable Sillian Hair Restorer. For more than twenty years its sales have been enormous, but we have yet to learn of its first failure.

AYER'S Cherry Pectoral.

No other complaints are so insidious in their attack as those affecting the throat and lungs; none so trifling with by the majority of sufferers. The ordinary cough or cold, resulting perhaps from a trifling or unconscious exposure, is often but the beginning of a fatal sickness. AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL has well proven its efficacy in a forty years' fight with throat and lung diseases, and should be taken in all cases without delay.

A Terrible Cough Cured.

In 1857 I took a severe cold, which affected my lungs. I had a terrible cough, and passed night after night without sleep. The doctors gave me up. I tried AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL, which relieved my lungs, induced sleep, and afforded me the rest necessary for the recovery of my strength. By the continued use of the PECTORAL, a permanent cure was effected. I am now 62 years old, hale and hearty, and am satisfied your CHERRY PECTORAL saved me. HORACE FAIRBROTHER, *27-c, Rockingham, N.Y., July 15, 1882.

Croup—A Mother's Tribute.

"In the country last winter my little boy, three years old, was taken ill with croup; and I had to look for him to die. In consultation, one of the family suggested the use of AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL, a bottle of which was always kept in the house. This was tried in small and frequent doses, and to our delight in less than half an hour the little patient was breathing easily. The doctor said that the case was a very rare one, and saved my darling's life. Can you wonder at our gratitude? Sincerely yours, MRS. EMMA GRIDLEY, 153 West 128th St., New York, N.Y., 1882.

Lake Crystal, Minn., March 15, 1882.

"I suffered for eight years from Bronchitis, and after trying many remedies with no success, I was cured by the use of AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL. JOHN WALKER, Duluth, Minn., April 2, 1882.

"I cannot say enough in praise of AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL, believing as I do that but for its use I should long since have died from lung trouble. E. BRADGORD, Palestine, Tex., April 22, 1882.

No case of an affection of the throat or lungs exists which cannot be greatly relieved by the use of AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL, and it will always care when the disease is not already beyond the control of medicine.

They hope to ensure a large increase of express business by the reduction.—ADVT.

MANY express approval of the suggestion to the school board to employ Mr. Watson to give instruction in the winter evenings, or, at least, giving him permission to occupy a department of the public school, with maps, etc., for that purpose. Every encouragement should be given to young lads desirous of turning their evenings to advantage. It is gratifying to learn that many are actually doing so.

PELIC CIRCLES.—On Monday evening Chief Gynyon arrested John Smith, of Tyendinaga, who is accused of obtaining money under false pretences from John Outwater, of Tyendinaga, on the 19th of February, 1876. The amount involved is over $600. The Chief brought him to Shannonsville where he delivered him to Constable Steel, who had been searching for him in vain for a considerable time. He was subsequently brought before police magistrate Flint for trial.

DITCHING OPERATIONS.—Ditching operations on the "Bay View Farm" are being carried on very extensively this fall. It is worth while going a long way to see Mr. Tompkins handle four horses driven abreast, while he manages at the same time the many levers connected with the ditching machine. We noticed a ditch 120 rods long and not yet filled in, which was so perfectly graded that water was running like a little river down the centre of the drain. The whole operation is very interesting and Messrs. Joseph Alfred and Jacob Marsh merit much praise for their careful attention to true grading and the safety of the machine; not one serious break having occurred since they began operations.

ALL SAINTS CHURCH (UPPER MOHAWK).—The Harvest Festival service at All Saints on Sunday, 12th Oct. was a complete success, saving that unfortunately wine was not provided for the Holy Communion, in consequence of which there was no Celebration and upwards of 50 Communicants were disappointed. The decorations which were so well executed as to be beyond praise, included the apparent institution of stained and plain glass in all the windows, an effect which was wrought by the use of tissue paper of various hues. Miss Hill, the organist had her choir out in full force and the Canticles and Hymns were unusually well rendered. The Congregation completely filled the church. The decorations will remain up until after next Sunday that they may be seen by those who were unable to be present on the 12th. inst.

The Emperor of Germany and the Regency Council of Brunswick, both refuse to acknowledge the claim of Duke of Cumberland as successor of the late duke.

Toronto is justly jealous of Kingston, the burglars in the latter city having been successful in robbing the city clerk's office which is situated just above the police headquarters.

This Toronto newspaper, which a few days ago were ready to maintain that the policy of that city were the very best in the world, now plainly state, what every one knew, and admit that they are remarkable only for their inefficiency.

Parrel made a powerful speech in Parliament condemnatory of the government's Irish policy. Mr. Gladstone replied defending Earl Spencer and refusing an investigation of the Maamtrasna trial. It is thought that the Irish party will be divided on the Franchise Bill vote.

SHANNONVILLE.
(From our own correspondent.)

At the price of barley has somewhat advanced within the past few days, farmers are taking advantage of the rise and a brisk trade is now being carried on.

Mr. T. F. Morden took charge of the young peoples prayer-meeting Tuesday night last, at the leader and several others including the Rev. J. C. Ash and lady, attended a lecture in Bridge street church,
Belleville, given by the celebrated Dr.
Sexton of London, Eng. The subject he so ably expounded was Atheism.

We see that Miss Jennie Williams has returned home after a few days pleasantly spent in Deseronto.

Mr. J. S. Kerr has been laying a new floor in his store and otherwise preparing for the winter.

CONSEJO.

The steam yacht "Angler" arrived last week from Rochester, with a party of gentlemen who proved themselves vigorous sportsmen. They obtained a good many ducks.

Barley is at last moving quite briskly.
The price ranges from 53 to 56. There has been but one small cargo shipped and that by Mr. J. J. Robinson.

Mr. Annis, of Barrie, at a temperance meeting held in the Methodist Church, the cause of temperance, but the general sentiment is that his statements were overdrawn.

Mr. Henry Johnson, of Hastings, is in town, the guest of Mr. J. A. Johnson.

Mr. W. N. Garreth, agent for the C. O.
Ry. at Bannockburn, is in town relieving
Mr. H. Marrow, who is taking his holidays.

Mr. Jos. Ward, who has been seriously ill from a severe attack of diphtheria, is now convalescent.

Mrs. Wm. Smith was seized last night with an epileptic fit and to-day she is dying.
Universal sympathy is felt for the bereaved family.

GREEN POINT.
(From our own Correspondent.)

The Kent and daughter, of Belleville, are visiting at Mr. A. Vandusen's.

The Scott Act campaign reached us on Saturday night as announced. Mrs. Youmans, being overworked, was not able to attend the able deputation sent was most cordially received by a large representative audience. Mr. George How was called to the chair.

Mr. G. G. McCullen, of Picton, was called on, his sound arguments on the evils of intemperance and common sense view of the effect on the farmer could not be improved to go up on the 30th to support the Act. Rev. Mr.
Clark next addressed the meeting in a very able manner telling of the sad effects of intemperance, persuading the people to rise to a higher state of morality and suppress the great evil by recording their votes in favor of the act.

Mr. John Carman and daughter, of Long Island, N. Y., are here visiting friends.

Mr. and Mrs. L. Carlett and family, of Belleville, spent last Sunday here with their parents.

Mrs. Lawrence Lyons and Mrs. A. Potter left by train, Quinte last Thursday for Paisley where they intend staying a couple of weeks.

Barley is moving briskly here. D. B.
Cole is buying for Mr. Cranite. Mr.
Mahar and Mr. Cranite are loading a boat at the farmer's dock near Northport.

READ.
(From our own Correspondent.)

Mr. Michael Hayes, of Chicago, is visiting his relatives here.

Mr. Charles Meade, one of the pupils of our school has left for Ottawa to attend Ottawa College, an institution ably and successfully conducted by the oblate Fathers.

Mr. Barry, of Morrisburg, who has been visiting the Rev. Father Meade, has returned home.

The weather has been very changeable and cold during the past week, and on the 22nd we had our first fall of snow.

There is not much grain moving, as the prices for all kinds of grain are so low that the farmers are not inclined to sell. The price of wheat is a little better, 60 and 61 being offered.

Our young people are enjoying themselves about the lake and on the fall; the apple-bee, the raffle and the dance are all in season.

All the threshing is done around this section, and though the crops were light owing to the long drought in the early part of the season, the grain has turned out fairly well.

Potatoes have turned out very well this year, everywhere. Some of our farmers have had an immense crop. Robt. has proved a good crop also.

Your correspondent has been very busy the last two weeks, and has been unable to supply you with much news. However, there has not been much news of any kind to chronicle.

Saturday being All Saints Day, there will be Divine Service in St. Charles Church.

VENNAOAR.
(From our own Correspondent.)

There is another party of hunters on Beula lake, composed of three gentlemen from near Tamworth.

Mr. C. Cawson, merchant of Grifflit, gave P. A. Scott a friendly visit a few days ago.

Mr. Charles A. Johnston, of Alpena, Mich., is expected back soon to settle on his farm in Miller.

FRIDAY, OCTOBER 31, 1884.

The annexation of Jamaica to the Dominion is a question which is at present receiving the attention of Canadian statesmen. The project which in the west is meeting with considerable opposition is viewed with more favor by the people of Quebec and the Maritime Provinces who see in that island a good opening for enlarged trade. The people of Jamaica are evidently favorable to the proposed scheme, and the same may be said of the other West India islands which have for several years been suffering from severe business depression. There is no doubt that many difficulties would for a time have to be encountered, as a large mass of the population is said to be unfitted for self-government. We know something of matters could not be much worse in Jamaica, so that the evils which it is feared would arise from the accession of a large number of illiterate voters would not probably be so very formidable. The West India Islands have immense resources capable of unlimited development and the change might in many ways prove beneficial. The property at present most exorbitant amounts for salaries of officials, and local government. Annexation would direct the revenues misapplied in such a manner into more useful channels. While all prudence should be exercised before committing the country to the scheme, there is no necessity of undue timidity in the policy to be pursued. If, after careful consideration, the proposed union would seem to burden Canada with no crushing financial burden we can see no reason why the West India Islands should not join the great confederation of British North American colonies.

CONGREGATIONAL SOCIAL.

The congregation of the Church of the Redeemer enjoyed a pleasant social in the Church on Tuesday evening. The event was under the auspices of the Kirk-session and consisted of addresses by several members of that body, readings, and music, both vocal and instrumental. Various solos were rendered with more than ordinary acceptance by Mrs. Campbell and Miss Anderson, and a duet by Misses Barnhart and Anderson was also well received. Mrs. Craig rendered several selections on the organ and piano with her wonted taste and skill. The readings by J. W. Dexter and Rev. R. J. Craig did credit to the dicatory powers of both those gentlemen. During the evening an adjournment was made to the lecture room, in which some apartments were occupied by a number of ladies discussing a beautiful supply of refreshments. This part of the programme was presided over by the Rev. J. W. Dexter, though possibly at times some of the ladies, presiding at the tables with much grace and dignity. The pleasure of the evening was greatly enhanced by the presentation of an address to W. R. Aylsworth Esq., by the Kirk-session and Board of Managers, on behalf of the congregation. The presentation was made by E. W. Richardson, Esq., who, in a preliminary address, referred to the many obligations under which the congregation was placed by the Rev. Aylsworth and the pleasure all had in thus acknowledging it. Mr. Aylsworth responded in suitable terms, expressing his gratitude for the address, and wishing the church all success in the future. The address, which was most elegantly engrossed and illuminated and placed in a handsome frame, is given below:

ADDRESS.

To W. R. Aylsworth, Esq.: We, the members of the Kirk-session and Board of Managers of the congregation of the Church of the Redeemer in connection with the Presbyterian Church in Canada, gladly take this opportunity to give expression to our appreciation of the valuable services which you have for so many years rendered to the congregation.

As Treasurer of the Board of Managers you have cheerfully given time and attention to advance the interests of the congregation, and we willingly testify to the obligations under which we have been placed, and the invaluable aid you have afforded us by your counsel and experience.

These services are enhanced, in our estimation, by the fact that they have been rendered by one, who, in our opinion, is not only a man of high character, but one who is devoted to his own Country, has never been without a true spirit of Christian charity, found it possible to give friendly assistance to another branch of the Church of our common Master.

While regretting that it does, in some measure, deprive us of your presence and advice, we earnestly pray that you and your family may be long spared to the cause of Him that is able to keep you from falling, and to present you faultless before the presence of his glory with exceeding joy.

Deseronto, Oct. 27, 1884.

A few good Overcoats at the Big Store, their own make, to be sold cheap. Do not fail to inspect the stock of ladies' children's Hosiery at the Big Store. For quality and price they are unequalled.

B. of Q. RAILWAY.

Six carloads of doors and mouldings were exported to Great Britain from Deseronto during October.

Superintendent Browne has been over at Pictou arranging for an increase of travelling facilities during the winter months between Pictou and Deseronto.

Section foreman Wager has been improving the siding facilities at the east end of the town to accommodate the increase in traffic. The tracks at the west end of the town give evidence of his skill and judgment in such matters.

Over 1,700 carloads of freight have passed over the line so far this season. An increase of 50 per cent over last year.

Since the great reduction in the price of sugar at the Big Store they have sold on an average 4 barrels daily. Farmers as well as residents of the village should take advantage of the low price at which the Big Store is selling this indispensable article and secure their winter stock while they can get it at wholesale prices. A word to the wise is sufficient.

N. T. & Q. RY.

Barley is moving freely and farmers rejoice in the new method of shipment is a great saving of time giving them more time for ploughing and at the same time saving the county roads.

The mails will be started over the line on Saturday. The postal department send a mail clerk from Tanworth by the morning train, and from Napane by the noon train. Arrangements have also been completed for a good side service.

No. 24, the contractor's engine, was disabled on Monday and has been sent to Belleville for repairs.

Mr. J. M. Poitras has been out on the line arranging to place lumber and building material at the different stations along the line.

The indications now are that the difficulty in the drowned lands has been overcome.

Mr. W. H. Chisholm, one of the contractors of the N. T. & Q. Ry., is making good progress on his railway contract near New Brunswick, having ten miles ready for the rails.

Superintendent Shervett went to Toronto yesterday, being summoned there by the illness of his sister, Miss A. Shervett. Chief Engineer Butler and W. R. Aylsworth Esq. are inspecting the Thousand Islands Railway at Gananoque with a view to some improvements.

Secretary Williams was at Tanworth and other stations on Thursday in connection with railway business.

A constant improvement is evident in the matter of tidying up the right of way, improving curves, opening ditches, etc., evidencing energetic management and competent section foremen.

Mr. Claywell having finished dock repairs at Oswego, may be expected to take a hand at the settlement of the drowned lands difficulty.

The construction of the telegraph line is progressing rapidly. Mr. Hampton will attend to the making of connections with stations and otherwise directing the electric current into proper channels.

Care of the Insane.

To the Editor of the Tribune:

For the first time I am in receipt of your neatly gotten up paper, "THE TRIBUNE," of September 26th, in which issue you have noticed the article of a Belleville daily, referring to the proposed method of placing lunatics in the jail with prisoners. You added that this barbarous custom is unworthy of this great province. I am, sir, of the same opinion. Just think of an insane person in the jail for over 3 weeks, perfectly naked with other prisoners, some of which are boys of 10 or 12 years of age, with others who have perhaps committed no other crime than having taken a few glasses too much and not a few who have not yet been proven guilty of any crime. The jail officials, the prisoners as well as the insane, are suffering from this custom. We boast of our charities, civilization, our morality, and of our country, which I love, and which is one of the most beautiful and prosperous, yet all the beauty loses its charms when these bad customs and regulations come to our notice.

It would not be very expensive to remedy this great evil as a special place for lunatics could be easily erected; they have the right to be cared for as they should. I hope I shall see the day soon when this matter shall be examined by the proper authorities and soon be rectified.

I remain, yours truly,

ANSEL SCHUSTER,

TOLD IN TWO LETTERS.

FROM THE SON: "28 Cedar St., New York, Oct. 2, 1883.

Gentlemen: My father resides at Glover,

Vt. He has been a great sufferer from Scrofula, and the enclosed letter will tell you what a marvelous effect has had in his case. I think his blood must have contained the humor for at least ten years; but it did not show, except in the form of a scrofulous sore on the wrist, until about five years ago. From a few spots which appeared at that time, it gradually spread so as to cover his entire body. I assure you he was terribly afflicted, and an object of pity, when he began using your medicine. Now, there are few men of his age who enjoy as good health

as he has. I could easily name fifty persons who would testify to the facts in his case.

Yours truly, W. M. PHILLIPS."

FROM THE FATHER: "It is both a pleasure and a duty for me to state to you the benefit

I have derived from the use of

Ayer's Sarsaparilla.

Six months ago I was completely covered with a terrible humor and scrofulous sores. The humor caused an incessant and intolerable

itching, and the skin cracked so as to cause the blood to flow in many places whenever

I moved. My sufferings were great, and my life a burden. I commenced the use of the

SARSAPARILLA in April last, and have said it regularly since that time. My condition began to improve at once. The sores have all healed, and I feel perfectly well in every respect—being now able to do a good day's NELLO.

THE STORY OF MY LOVE.

CHAPTER III.

So little did I realize or understand this new sensation which possessed my whole being that I laughed again when Lady Saxon drove over to the hall and we spent two long hours in discussing it.

"I like to speak to you about Nello," she said; "you seem to understand him. I know that talking about him so frequently is a weakness of mine, and at times I see a half-satirical smile on the faces of many of my listeners; but you never smile and never tire—you understand."

So, from the day on which we stood side by side before his portrait, the young lord seemed to form a link between the mother and myself.

Aunt Annette was much amused at the ardent friendship which Lady Saxon had evinced for me.

"If you were Lady Saxon's own daughter, she could not care more for you," she would say to me.

Why did those simple words, so carelessly uttered, touch my very heart? Ourselves would come home every day, and I should see him; and he would talk to me this dreamer of dreams, because I was so much like him. I never would become confused and my heart beat more quickly than ever.

One morning Lady Saxon drove over with a bundle of letters from her son to read to me. They were dated from different places, and in several of them the name of Nello was mentioned, but no definite time was mentioned.

"He may come at any time now," said Lady Saxon—"at any hour. If Heaven will, but give me no more news again, he shall not leave me. I wish he would marry."

As she spoke she fixed her eyes on my face, and my instinct told me that in her heart she said, "I wish he would marry me."

It was early in the morning, and the world seemed a paradise of beauty, fragrance, and song, the great magnolia trees on the lawn were all in bloom, and the light breeze wafted the fragrance of myriads of flowers.

I had some fine white jessamine that was in the full perfection of beauty, and as Lady Saxon was very fond of it, I went to drive over and take her some. The birds were trilling their tuneful lays, the bank and hedges were resplendent with clusters of wild flowers, whilst the wind played merrily over the grass, and gently among the leaves of the lime trees.

All nature appeared in its brightest garb, and in its gayest mood. To my girl's fancy, excited by a long absence from the young lord, the birds sang "Nello" in their shrill sweet voices, and the wind whispered "Nello" to the green leaves that came from them all hidden glow.

I drove through the wealth of rich summer foliage and flowers, always keeping in view the murmuring stream that rolled in the golden sunlight, until I came to Darnon's lovely mansion.

A groom came out and relieved me of the high spirited ponies.

"Her ladyship is in the garden," Mrs. Gordon, he said, knowing that I always made my way straight to the garden. "Yes, her ladyship was in the garden, her hands full of crimson roses, and a light on her pleasant face such as I had never seen there before."

"Yes," she cried, when she saw me—she always used the French form of my name "Nello," what good angel has brought you here?"

"I came to bring you this," I answered, holding out the odorous jessamine. "Let me twine it with your roses," I said; and, lo, she was looking at me with tears in her eyes!

"This is not the only welcome gift that has come to me since you have left me," she said. "Come with me, Felice; I have something to show you," she said; and I followed her, my hands filled with overflowing fragrant flowers.

She led the way to a pretty little drawing room, called the View room, from the fact that a magnificent view of the sea, of the stretch of yellow sand, of the blue waters that came rolling in, breaking into sheets of white foam, could be obtained from the long wide window that entered the room quietly, and I followed. By the open window, intently watching the intolling of the waves, stood a tall young man, and, when he turned round, he looked at me. I saw the face of Lord Saxon—"Nello," as the birds, the leaves, and the wind sang it; "Nello," as the sea seemed to utter; and I liquid music from his mother's lips with Lord Saxon to me. As she had taken me to see his portrait, so this now brought me to see him in person.

"Nello," she said, "this is my new neighbor, Man Felice Gordon, the 'Felice' of whom I have written so often. Though I am an old lady, and she a young one, we are very fast friends."

"My mother's friends are always mine," he said, holding out his hand to me in the most cordial manner.

I wish I could describe what I then felt. In our lives there are moments so full of emotion that they seem to make a turn in them that we never reach again.

This was such a moment for me. I could not describe it. I felt as if I had almost a shock, as though the picture had suddenly come to life and the dark tender eyes were again smiling down into mine. Then I saw the dancing waves, crest-tripped by the powerful rays of the summer sun, I saw the yellow sands, and the gently-waving foliage of the trees on the crest of the dune. I felt as if I had been in the heart of the sea, and I felt as if I had been in the heart of the sun.

Ah me, to this day the sight and the scent of those flowers vividly bring back the past to me! When I look at them, my young lord comes home to me with singular force—

"I shall never again be friends with roses!" And then I raised my eyes and looked at the original of the picture that had so strangely fascinated me. It was as though I had raised them to the warm rosy-day sun, as though a thrill of life had passed through my veins; my heart beat violently, my face flushed, some of the flowers fell unheeded to the ground. I could not restrain myself, I had said, that all women who looked into his face loved him. Did I? The very thought made me tremble; but it was not with fear. He was speaking to me, and I hardly knew, in the spell his presence cast over me I saw nothing but the surpassing loveliness of his face and the attributes of a noble character were delineated in it, and it had an indefinable something which, without my knowing it, drew my heart from my breast and kept it, it was saying, "and how beautiful they are!" I did not know that red roses and white jessamine went so well together.

"That is Felice," said Lady Saxon; and it is perfect."

"It is like herself," he remarked, with a gleam of unobtrusive admiration.

Ten minutes later I was sitting on the couch by the great window. Lady Saxon had left me, and she had said, "I have relieved me of my burden of flowers, and I am at home with them—happy, light of heart, and full of life."

Almost a terrified delight, something quite new to me, I could not tell which was the greatest, the pleasure or the pain, as I drank the pleasure or the pain, as I drank in every word that he uttered. I had never before known the charm of a good talker, and to me the flow of his words was like listening to a strain of sweet music. He had a clear, cheery voice, and a laugh that it did not cost him to hear. Looking back on that day, I blame myself. No girl ought to give her love unasked. It is unadvisedly, undignified; but it was Lady Saxon's fault that she had done so.

She had sown the seed, and I was to reap the harvest.

Lady Saxon begged me to stay for the day, and, assuming that she had my consent, ordered the carriage to fetch Aunt Annette. It was a day of days. I could no more describe that day than I could the roses, the sky, and the purple that flash the morning away. It was the day on which my soul woke to maturity; and the dawning of a new life was terrible, even to its beauty.

It was bright; sun and dew and beauty—sun when the light of his face was turned away, with his heart's love in store for me, he showed me my gracious little act of attention; shade when he was absent or engrossed with another.

We were out on the lawn under the white magnolia-tree, and he was talking to me of the power of its perfume. When we came into the house, he told me that he had a legend of one of his ancestors, who broke off a spray to give to her lover when he was going to the wars, and it was returned to her days, which made my heart throb with joy.

"It was taken from this very tree," he said.

After dinner, when we were out under the trees, Lord Saxon told me how often his mother had written about me, and how well he knew the name of Felice Gordon.

"With his heart's love in store for me," he said, with a smile. "I thought you were a staid matronly lady, and I found you a young girl. I was astonished when I saw the smile behind that great mass of flowers."

I longed with all my passionate young heart to ask him if he had found me as fair, as I had found him. But no—he must never know that his mother had made me love him before he returned home. And so, to me, the day was a day of the cypress, watching the sun set over the river and the pine-woods, these words came into my mind—

"My mother, listening to my sleep, would have said that she had found me as fair, as I had found him. But no—he must never know that his mother had made me love him before he returned home. And so, to me, the day was a day of the cypress, watching the sun set over the river and the pine-woods, these words came into my mind—

"The nightingale, the nightingale!"

"Through his words the nightingales, I heard straight and full their clear song call, like arrows through the nightingale's heart. And love was swift as it came."

moment all the brightness and sweetness of heaven seemed to be showered upon me. He was leaning to love me! And he kissed me again in the woe, when we wandered together to listen to the nightingale. And as we strolled on in the silvery moonlight which pierced the leafy canopy above us, with only the occasional shrill of the birds breaking the silence, I thought how applicable those lines were to me—

"First time he kissed me, he but only kissed me, and I thought I was in heaven. I wrote him, and ever since it grew more clear and slow, to world-greetings, quick with his 'Oh, when the angels speak. A ring of amethyst about the neck, and a ring of diamonds on the hand. Than that first kiss. The second passed like the first, and sought the forehead, and half kissed."

Half kissing on the hair. Oh, beyond meek That was the charm of love, which love's own touch with sanctifying sweetness did precede."

AMONG OUR EXCHANGES.

Girls who run away with their fathers' male servants are now called "Gilles of the vale."

A Chicago man died while waiting in a drug store for a prescription. Most men do not die while waiting for a prescription; they only wait for a cure.

A Southern woman said to me of her neighbor, who accepted attentions from a gentleman this woman disliked: "I do hope she will not marry him. I stay awake nights to hate him!"

How many things work around! So brought clothes into the world, and as it were not for sin nobody would go to church, for had it not been for sin there would be no clothes to show there.

"So you want my autograph in your book, do you?" said Mrs. P. "I've written to a little girl. 'Well, honey, in real sorry, but I haven't had a plover taken a new I was married, and I can't give it to you.'"

"What do you think of this reception?" asked the leader of a vigilance committee, as he placed a long line of men in a neck. "I wouldn't mind it a particle if it were a little less cordial," was the significant reply.

Mrs. M.—"I don't get the hang of this Chinese war." Mr. M.—"What is it you don't understand, my dear?" Mrs. M.—"Well, first I don't want Li Hung Chang for my neighbor. Second, if you are a woman and not try to understand such things."

A married man is not without his troubles. A Samerville man hunted all over the house the other day for his tobacco box, when he found it under the bed. He was looking for it when he was looking for it.

Overest from the omnibus: A—"O! what sickness is the Mrs. B. dead?" B—"Exactly know they're not, perhaps because she took too much of the medicine."

"At her marriage was she, according to her own story, three years younger than her husband, and after her death was she, according to her friends, thirty years older?"

The origin of the expression "where the shoe pinches" is thus given: "Plutarch relates the story of a Roman who was divorced from his wife. His wife, being highly blamed by his friends, who demanded, 'Is she not chaste?' he said not 'fret' held out his hand and asked them whether it was not new and well made. 'Yes,' said he, 'none of you can tell where it pinches me.'"

How the impertinent Mr. Cass was salted down: Mr. Jack Cass, who is considerable of a dandy in his way, had been particularly particular in his toilet, and he had said something to Miss Sharp that was just too saucy for anything. "Why don't you box his ears?" asked one of the girls. "I don't know where I can find a box big enough."

"Your son William is in the city. I understand, Mr. B. might be a trade?" "Oh, my, no! He has entered the professions."

"Ah, which one?" "He has adopted that old-fashioned profession of being a lawyer."

"He was through a friend who said he was engaged in painting the town red."

Sweets of the honeymoon: Husband—"Hilda, dear, as I was passing through our garden I saw some very nice looking pumpkins; perhaps you would like to go and gather the first fruit of the season yourself?"

Young wife (anxious to conceal her ignorance in the vegetable department): "Tell me, you want Adonis, we will go together; you shall pick it and I will hold the ladder."

A correspondent of a family magazine wants to know how to cool cabbage without the disagreeable odor of cooking filling nearly every room in the house. The plan is an excellent one, and is as follows: Take a very simple and effective method of cooking cabbage. The aroma of the rubber kills the odor of the cabbage—and you will probably wonder how it is that a person who suggested the plan, after you have tried it."

An Austin negro, familiarly known as "Rabbit Hunk," has returned to Austin after an absence of several years. "Where have you been, Rabbit Hunk?" Uncle Sam asked. "Where I been? I been to Mexico."

"How do you like it there?" "Do country an mighty fine, but de Mezzico country is no better. I has struck my eye."

"So dey am not so part as de celled folks?" "Lawd no. I libbed right among 'em feak years, and when I left 'em dey didn't know me. I was a little more in de dust com dar. Dey am de slowest folks to larn I has struck yet."

"I understand that you have stopped practicing?" said the Secretary of State to an eminent colored physician. "Yas, sah, 'cloded ter 'gin up de trade an' go to preachin'."

In dis country dar hin't no money ter be made in de practice' of medicine. Why, sah, if I dar 'voted my time ez close ter suthin' else ez I has ter business, I would be der putty well off by de time."

Two white birds, one of which was a pair, me, sah. "Why didn't you see them?" "Twouldn't dose no good, 'case da wuz dead, sah. I got 'em, but I couldn't get 'em."

"You'er nether hab no health an' constitution, sah."

Before a man cracks a joke he should consider how he will make it himself; for many a very good blow have self; for many a very good blow have self; for many a very good blow have self.

Will be willing to take; some men throw salt on others, but they snarl it as if it falls on their own heads. When they get to Roland for their Oliver, or a V for their tat, they don't like it; yet nothing is more just. Bitter deserve to be bitten.—[Spurgeon.]

Name Evolution.

Emigration is a much more serious matter than it is generally supposed to be. The coast of South Carolina in the days of French confusion, and the English in the days of that oblivion. Taring his face, westward, he pushed his way to the mountains. He had begun to feel the first with the despair of an exile, and he ended it with something of the energy and enterprise of a pioneer.

In the process of time, the English came to the small stream of English colonists that was then trickling slowly southward through the wonderful alleys that stretch from Pennsylvania to Georgia, between the foot hills of the Blue Ridge and the great Cumberland range. Here, for the first time, the English name of France met in conflict the "sav-ri," the "we-u-u-u" and the "yo-u-u-u" of the English-Pennsylvania Georgians. The conflict was brief. There was but one Gerald Pettit, and although he might multiply the name, none but the thousands and hundreds of thousands, it was an undoubtedly, yet in the very nature of things, the perpetual volly of "yo-u-u-u" and "we-u-u-u" must come to a long time.

By degrees the climate suited them. By degrees they fitted themselves to Gerald Pettit; they carried it with them. With the new mill and new family. It gave them a new name. Gerald Pettit, presumably with his hand on his forehead, said to his wife, "You should remember that you are a woman and not try to understand such things."

A married man is not without his troubles. A Samerville man hunted all over the house the other day for his tobacco box, when he found it under the bed. He was looking for it when he was looking for it.

Overest from the omnibus: A—"O! what sickness is the Mrs. B. dead?" B—"Exactly know they're not, perhaps because she took too much of the medicine."

"At her marriage was she, according to her own story, three years younger than her husband, and after her death was she, according to her friends, thirty years older?"

The origin of the expression "where the shoe pinches" is thus given: "Plutarch relates the story of a Roman who was divorced from his wife. His wife, being highly blamed by his friends, who demanded, 'Is she not chaste?' he said not 'fret' held out his hand and asked them whether it was not new and well made. 'Yes,' said he, 'none of you can tell where it pinches me.'"

How the impertinent Mr. Cass was salted down: Mr. Jack Cass, who is considerable of a dandy in his way, had been particularly particular in his toilet, and he had said something to Miss Sharp that was just too saucy for anything. "Why don't you box his ears?" asked one of the girls. "I don't know where I can find a box big enough."

"Your son William is in the city. I understand, Mr. B. might be a trade?" "Oh, my, no! He has entered the professions."

"Ah, which one?" "He has adopted that old-fashioned profession of being a lawyer."

For the curing of corn there is probably no better mode, taking into account the value of the fodder, than by spreading it out until sufficiently dried. The mode of using horse manure, pin about the roots, as above mentioned, is a good purpose, and more convenient, but foregoing security to the stock team, the arrangement of the straw, so that the horses can get at it, seems to serve a good purpose. In the adoption of this mode, convenience seems to be sacrificed to economy. It is common to spread on each side of the crib up which the stock is placed, With average corn, twenty or thirty hills will form a row, and the ends of the spindles, and almost invariably stand erect. If the corn is small, the rows may be made recter, admit of a free circulation of air, and the stalks are less liable to rot. When a horse is employed, unless especial pains are taken, the stocks, with the weakening effect of the manure, will soon begin to fall down, resulting in injury to both man and fodder. It is always safe to combine cutting corn with the other modes, especially the last one, little benefited by being reared over. Of three different modes tested, after some years ago, by S. F. Smith, Esq., of New York, he indicated very clearly, following to stand undisturbed until hucked, there was a marked advantage in weight of grain per acre, and the whole of the grain commenced to harven.

Farmers have not been seriously troubled with diseased potatoes for a number of years, until the present season. At Quisset, Mass., I noticed that potatoes were quite extensively diseased, and that where, in the fall, they were dug up and stored in a roomy, and placed in the cellar, they had to be removed and sorted over, sustaining a loss of 25 per cent. In the adjoining State of Connecticut, but little effect was observed, nothing efficient having been done. It is possible that there may have been some change from the ordinary pattern of the soil, or the digging or storing, but at this season the condition of things is considerably changed. August was not very dry, and the weather has been unusually wet since an extremely hot wave, and with the result that there was an apparent change in the soil. It is possible that the soil may have resulted in premonitions of decay by which it was rapidly followed, and to a large extent, the farmers thought to arrest the decay by digging the potatoes up, and the result was that they remained; the seeds of disease had taken root and developed in the mass of stored tubers, and the decay was not arrested. In digging any thing in the line of digging, prearranging to wait until decay has exhausted its energies, and then they are left, they will decay.

I have observed especially in the variety known as the King of Tompkins Co., a tendency to be heavily water soaked, a condition which is difficult of accounting for. I have, on previous occasions, observed a similar condition in the variety known as the King of Fall Pippins and Chabro's Russets, and in fact, one is liable to come across a single specimen of water soaked apple with any variety. Now the question arises. What is the cause of this condition? Is it due to the soil in which the ground because your apples were picked from the tree and had not come in contact with the earth. But I observed certain facts which may have had an influence in producing this condition, and may be of some value to you. I will leave the matter for the investigation of the scientific student.

In the first place, from about the first of September, the temperature for about two weeks was excessively hot; in the case of the fruit trees, the surface turned brown in the middle of the day. There was the appearance of having been super-heated, and where this condition exists, was also found the water soaked condition. Another factor was the wind, which was blowing from the south. The conditions named, existed only upon those portions of the trees most exposed, or facing the south; hence, upon the interior of the tree, or upon its northernly exposed side, the water soaked condition was not found. Whether there is any connection of the different conditions named, and the result mentioned, I am not prepared to state, but simply mention the same items of experience or observation touching similar cases.

The tuberose has long been admitted, and was formerly considered to be beyond the care and cultivation of the farmer's wife; a sort of hot-house product to be obtained only by an expenditure of money, but it is now common to find this beautiful member of the floral kingdom in the flower garden, which has become almost as important upon the farm as the vegetable garden.

The chief point to be considered in managing tuberose bulbs is their extreme tenderness; this is to be provided for in the planting, if they are set in the ground, in the keeping of them in the fall, and in the keeping ing of the bulbs through the winter. If they are exposed to frost, either in the spring, before lifting, or during winter, they will be greatly damaged if not wholly destroyed. For that reason, in the fall, they should be taken from the ground before there is any danger of a killing frost, because if the soil is badly frozen, the bulbs will be injured. They should be exposed in a sunny place, so as to become as thoroughly dried as possible, and when so dried, securely placed in a box or basket and stored in a cool, airy, and dry place during the winter. If chilled at all during the winter, all hopes of future beauty will be blasted, and the spikes derived from a full bloom of spikes of tuberousness will be small and few. It is therefore, requiring due diligence in their proper protection.

There is one thing it seems impossible to do—to make sheep do well in a stable in the summer time. They will gain very fast at pasture, with a little grain. In winter they eat better, and with some roots, will fatten. But in the summer, when I am selling my surplus sheep at a low price, I am going to feed them. I do not much expect to get any profit on the food, only enough to pay for it. The sheep will be enough to pay for the feed. I am going to sell each food, this will pay for all of the trouble, and the grain goes into the home market. This idea of a home market in their own houses, is just what every owner of a flock of sheep should have. How much wisdom there would be in the plan to look around and get some animals to fatten, and so keep the grain at home, than to take it away to market, and there compete with our fatted sheep. Who can raise it at so much better a price than I can?

A gentleman who had bred Ma'ay fowl for thirty years, and won more prizes with these fowls than any other fancier in England, says that breeding in-and-in does not necessarily cause deterioration, but all depends how this thing is managed. My plan is to keep about five or six runs, and to rear 200 chickens each year, and to select the best birds from each run for crossing. I thus secure sufficient crossing to prevent deterioration. Many animals are gregarious and the males must frequently pair with their own daughters, for they expel the young males as well as all intruders.

Fortunately, for a wholesome study of one's demise, there are assurances abundant in the pages of the Journal. The deceased have been restored to consciousness affirmations of the dying, that there is physical rest from death. Burns' friend had to recital the efforts made to reanimate him, and the fact that he had been in a prolonged slumber. Dr. Solander, the traveller, was so delighted with the sensations of excessive cold, that he was the first to lie down in the snow to realize the luxury of such a death. The dying man, who was to "write how easy and delightful it is to die." Infants die as serenely as they breathe, and not a few among the advanced in years treat death as a friend to be sought. The foregoing paragraphs are not intended to encourage the dying, but to ratify a most distressing experience. But it is reported of these who have been saved from strangulation, that the agony promised to be brief, and was rapidly replaced by

One would fain believe that the kind God who suffered us to feel no sigh in coming would take no delight in turning our farewells into writhing—nay, He does not quit us at the last. He is our greatest benefactor in allowing us to sleep out of weariness. Death is, assuredly, no tax collector; its "jaws" are not the clutches of an assassin; there is no "victory to the grave"; the ghost speeds away from us as it entered, with no ruff. The sense of death, as Shakspeare has it, is most in apprehension. It is the fear of the lonely night, not the throes of nature, that makes the leaving painful.

Of all the extravagant habits, which bring trouble to one's neighbors, as well as one self, is that of extravagant speaking. How many a reputation has been ruined, how many a home blasted, how many a business credit impaired, by an extravagant mode of speech—a remark with a strain of truth, made in a moment of anger, so as to grow to such extravagant proportions, the harm is done forthwith. Extravagant professions of love, or friendship, are not only unbecoming, but they lead to the feeling—it will not last long. Extravagance in religion leads to bigotry—politics to demagogism. In the press, under the name of "free press," there is no such thing as a free press, and so it goes. Let us recommend to the members of our readers afflicted with the vice—of extravagance in speech, to be "moderate" as the immortal Shoppers said: "Groom": "Love moderately" and bear in mind that moderation will insure tranquility of mind and a peaceful domestic circle.

A few weeks since there arrived in an eastern city from St. Augustine, Fla., a gentleman who had been traveling in the interior of that state, despite the hot weather, on important business, which led him in the vicinity of that well-known section the "Everglades." Fortunately for the gentleman in question, he remembered that an old friend had bought land near the route he was taking, and had there planted an orange grove, and it occurred to him that here was an opportunity for enjoying Florida hospitality, which had hitherto only reached him through the familiar moans of hotels.

His friend's orange grove covered about the last of a five-mile journey, and after a long and weary ride in the boundaries of the sparsely settled frontier region where it was he had no difficulty in finding it. Indeed, it was a very old place, and he was not long in coming to the old inn, which was built of oranges. From the last town he had taken horses for himself and servant, and the two rapid riders were soon in the city. The name of Mr. Canday, the gentleman in question, and who now tells the story, reached "Millmont" just before dusk, and after riding through a long, dark avenue of trees, he found the place where the story dwelling, evidently an old-timer's while his friend, Mr. Romany, came from a group of persons with whom he was conversing. The latter, however, did not come him. Introductions followed, and then it became evident to the guest that something more than common was disturbing the minds of his hosts. He was told of a mystery and a curious air of singularity, and expectation which soon set his curiosity on the qui vive.

Mr. Romaine either perceived this fact or was himself so full of his subject that he could not keep it secret, for he observed as they were enjoying their wine after dinner: "You came in good time to witness sensation, Canada."

"I had the impression from your manner there was something stirring. What is it?"

"Well, in brief, it is a ghost story. Several of us are going down into the Everglades to inspect for ourselves certain mysterious phenomena of a supernatural character which are said to make their appearance every ten years at this time."

"You surprise me. Have you any idea of the origin of the story?"

"Yes; I know the story and will tell later on. The occurrences happened about thirty years ago, and every ten years, on the 11th of August, which is to-night, the day that startling scenes occur near a deep black pool, where we shall go presently."

The party, as made up, consisted of three or four of Mr. Romayne's neighbors, himself and Mr. Cannaday, and at about ten o'clock the same night they started from the house, guided by an old negro who, Mr. Romayne said, had lived with Mr. Milnamore when the scene had occurred which it is supposed has given rise to the

Taking lanterns, the parties moved in single file through the plantation, and guided by the negro, who had been called with water at the camp, the careful picking of deep over hummocks, among vines and underbrush through the swamps of the Everglades, brought them to the side of a small pond, where they were met by a huge mass of rock which stood on its margin. The pool was about half an acre in extent, difficult of approach, and, Mr. Romanoff said, very deep and muddy. On the side of the rock, which was about 100 feet long, the party to huddle together upon it; and then, having first extinguished their lanterns, they seated themselves in various cramped positions and waited until the stars above their heads had become so numerous that the stars could be seen shining, reflected in the black waters of the pool. Occasional the creek of a frog or the sharp cry of some bruit was stupor, damp, and generally a lugubrious situation. It was about midnight when the silence was suddenly broken by a shriek, so awful as to fairly curdle the blood. It was repeated in a moment, and then there was a rush through tangled floors as though of someone escaping from punishment. I drew nearer, and nearer, and finally saw the cause, and the meaning of the person in hot flight was heard distinctly. The gentlemen had risen to their feet, and, standing by their backs against the huge boarder, peered into the direction whence the sound proceeded. Nearer still, and now the deep bay of a bloodhound pierced the night, and again that awful shriek—plainly that of a woman, tearing at her ears as she fled from the presence of their voices.

The noise of crashing through the underbrush, the heavy breathing of at least two persons, and the low, savage barking of the dog were now so near—in sound—that the watchers gazed in momentary expectation. "What is it?" asked one of the men. "This is what happened: six credit witnesses aver that suddenly a sheest of light, coming from no one could tell whence, illuminated the scene, and there before them stood a man, half grapple, half gorilla, half gorilla, half grapple, half supporting a girl clad in white, her hair disheveled, her clothes torn by the brambles, and who even as she appeared went forth again that way she came, leaving bewildered group of spectators, and in the moment were followed by a bloodhounds panting and growling, and, behind him, nailed, and heavy. The bright light managed to resound above their heads, and as Mr. Romayne, pointing upward, directed the attention of the two men to the light, which they had seen, they saw the young man standing upon it, with the girl clasped in his arms.

Meanwhile the dog had been following them, and he had been following them they reached the summit. The whole situation was plainly visible. Springing upon the roof, the two men saw the other's arm around the girl, and the girl was falling at his feet. Then there was a fierce struggle, and in a moment the stronger man seized the other around the waist, and threw him over the side. The girl cried, "Help!" and the two men heard the splash, saw the water over his form with a sluggish ripple—then something white and bright through—then the girl's face, pale and staring darkness came again, and there was neither dog nor man, nor anything but black pool, as still as ever, the dense fog settling down upon the scene.

With one accord the parties lifted antennas and hurried from the spot. Arrived at the homebase, Mr. R. Mynae called for spirits and food, and, indeed, all seemed in order. The young man, however, shared party never returned from anywhere. "There is no story to tell," replied Mr. R. Mynae. "I may have been there, but I have witnessed it all—exactly as I have told you." It described to me ever and over again.

The old man was Mr. Millamont, who owned the place. He had a young daughter, a girl was his daughter, the young man was the son of a neighboring planter, who was here to find them to further her visits, and finding them to be a young man, he was here, and when they climbed up on the rock to get away from the bloodbath followed into the pool. The young man was thrown into the pool. Tsen she plunged in and both were drowned. Mr. Millamont left the country before he could be arrested and returned to his home in St. Augustine two weeks after. His place remained without a tenant until I bought

The next morning Mr. Cannaday left for St. Augustine, and now the story in various forms is being circulated through the south. This is his version of it, as an eye and ear witness. And he believes his eyes and ears.—[New York Telegram.

The Requisites for a Successful Career as a Detective—Coolness, Bravery, and Good Judgment—The Real and the

"Looking back over my twenty year experience I can not say that I regret my choice of a profession," remarked a detective at one of the city agencies yesterday.

"What are the requisites of a good detective?" asked a reporter who had been listening to his stories.

"Fearlessness, coolness and self-control. Without these a man can never be a perfect detective, for though he may be useful in some branches of the business he can never attain to the highest eminence in all of them. He must also have strong perceptive faculties, and that power of generalization which will enable him to jump at once to correct conclusions. Memory is one of the correct conclusions. Memory is one of the most important essentials. One sight of a face must imprint it so indelibly upon the recollection that he can never forget it; and he must remember not only the face itself but the time, place, and circumstances in which it is associated. A memory of faces alone is not sufficient. The detective must have a strong memory for names, numbers, and dates as well. He must be intelligent, and there is no knowledge of any kind that may not some time be of value to him in his profession. His eyesight and hearing should be of the best, and he should cultivate the power of observation which will enable him to carefully note, without seeming to do so, everything by which he is surrounded.

"Detectives in real life are very different from those in novels and plays. The latter are represented as wearing various disguises such as wigs, false whiskers, etc., which they suddenly pull off at the most unexpected moments, thereby revealing their identity."

Dion Boucicault, in one of his plays, represents a detective who is quite a young man as making himself up for an elderly gentleman of more than ordinary intelligence and insight. In holding conversation with people who knew him well in previous personae without discovery. Charles Reade and Wilkie Collins do the same thing. In some of the most notable of their detective scenes, the detective is utterly impossible for the most skilful hand-worker to make up a wig or coat of false whiskers that can not be detected as false when worn, and every hair of the head and every fibre of the artist's "make-up" can not put upon their faces lines and wrinkles which indicate age such a way as to deceive, even when aided by the glamour of the light. I have never attempted to do any such disguise. Detectives on the stage are usually debonair individuals in real life, and must don whiskers. In real life there is nothing distinctive in the appearance and manner of detectives any more than there is in those of lawyers or merchants. For my own part, I am more gently taken for a 'well-to-do' farmer than anything else."

"That is a hard question to answer. There is no business in which the pay varies more. Sometimes a man after having had a little apprenticeship with the police force or in connection with some agency, will set up in business as a private detective, and then he charges whatever he pleases. Detectives are paid by the day and I have known some of these private detectives, such as I have mentioned, charge the unsophisticated $25 and even more per day."

"For the services of any of their detectives the Pinkerton agency charges $8 a day, of which about one half goes to the detective himself. This is the invoice charge, and none of the Pinkerton detectives are permitted to work upon any other basis or with a view to obtaining a contingency reward. This is the only right way, for detectives, like merchants, should have a price only, but most of the private detectives can be induced to take up cases of speculation—that is, to agree to demand nothing for their work unless successful, which event they are to receive a stipula-

"How do men become detectives?"
"They don't 'become'; they have a natural gift in that direction. Detectives, I believe, are born, not made. Many of them begin as amateurs. For instance, something occurs in their own lives which causes them to turn detective for their own purposes. They work up the case successfully; they find they like the work, and they embark on it as a business. You know that is the way Allan Pinkerton began. He lived in the west, and having horses stolen from him on several occasions he traced out the thieves in every instance, brought them to justice and recovered his property."

"You would be surprised to find how clever some amateur detectives are. I know a young Chestnut street merchant who would make one of the greatest of all detectives if he would follow the business. I would find out the whereabouts and antecedents of a young fellow whom he expected in a certain manner. He employed detectives, but they could discover nothing. Finally he began to look into the man himself, and although the man he was watching had left the city and covered up his tracks, I'm blest if he didn't find out everything there was to find. He discovered the dress of a girl on Race street to whom the man had been paying attentions.

"He called on her, represented himself as a lawyer, said that her lover would inherit a fortune if his identity could be established, and in order to do that he'd have to have some specimens of his handwriting, and he persuaded her to let him have two of the love letters she'd written him. That was as neat a piece of detective work as I ever heard of.

ed to do his duty, and feeling sure the result would be such earnest protestations of innocence as would convince the whole world of his sincerity, he persevered in his attempts to extort a confession. He acted with so much tact that the broke down completely, and was about to confess the whole affair, but being satisfied from her words and actions, that she was undoubtedly guilty, he turned away, and left her to her fate, whom he had allowed himself to love, and believe in had been guilty of such base actions that he burst forth into such a torrent of oaths and invectives against her as to ruin her lips forever on the subject of her crime. He was so prompt in acquitting her of lack of direct evidence, that you see how important it is for a detective to keep temper."

"Very often, an innocent man wrong accused will always appear like a guilty while a hardened criminal, under the most incriminating circumstances, will seem personification of virtuous innocence. I remember a singular circumstance that I curbed at the Smithsonian institution in Washington, when I was doing special duty there some years ago. In one of the coin cases there was a rare old Roman coin, supposed to be the only one of its kind in existence. One day a gentleman came with a written order from a high official, and he let them go. He then took out of the case to examine it. It was placed in his hand, and after looking at it for a moment he said, "I have no thought, to its place in the case and to leave the room. The curator approving the case to lock it found that the gentleman, who immediately became a reluctant indignant and declared positive that he would not leave the room, was trying to leave the room. I interrupted and being convinced from his conduct that he was not going to leave the room, I sent him home. He positively refused to admit this, whereupon the curator and myself after a hard struggle, succeeded in getting him out of the room. He was one of his pockets, was just going to take him to durane vile when the curator, who was not going to let him go, returned it to the gentleman with apology. The poor man had misaid the original purpose of the case, and he was not a great expense a similar one, which was found in his pocket, and his visit was the purpose of comparing the two."

TOWN AND COUNTY.

HALLOWE'EN.

Who will be the next President?

NEXT Thursday is Thanksgiving Day.

The next session of the Division Court will be held on the 5th of November.

Mr. M. CAMPBELL is having the gas introduced into his residence on Main street.

Mr. T. BUTLER's young orchard yields 100 bushels of choice apples this season.

SOME interesting announcements in our advertising columns. Study them carefully.

A CONSIDERABLE quantity of good hay is being brought to town, prices being 7 to 8 dollars per ton.

Mr. G. E. SNIDER makes some changes in his advertisement suitable to this season of interesting events.

A correspondent of the Belleville Intelligencer refers to Deseronto as a model town and future rival of Belleville.

Mrs. COLEMAN is doing an excellent business in stationery, toys, fancy goods, &c. Goods continue to arrive daily.

A Grand Promenade Concert will be held in the Presbyterian Sabbath School room on Tuesday eve., Nov. 11th. Look for small bills.

JERSEY CATTLE.—Mr. HOWATT, of Bay View Farm, has completed a sale to a gentleman of Halifax of four more Jerseys at satisfactory figures.

The depth of the new sewer on West Thomas street alone prevented a bloody combat the other day between two disputants thirsting for the fray.

BUGLARS are operating with renewed energy in neighboring towns and cities; it will be just as well to be prepared for their early visit to Deseronto.

DEMOLITION.—The work of tearing down the old dry kilns south of the Big Mill has been going on and those old land marks have become a thing of the past.

Mr. JOHN DALTON, who is now doing an excellent business in his line, has purchased a fast and stylish looking young horse to expedite the delivery of his goods.

CAPT. CRAIG, the popular commander of the Hero, will observe the festival of Halloween by a pleasant party on board the steamer to which several residents of Deseronto are invited.

COMPLAINTS are being made concerning the sewer at the corner of Edmond and St. George streets. A foul stench issues from it which, it is alleged, is very annoying and unhealthy. What does Mr. Stewart think of that?

A NUMBER of thoughtless boys have been annoying Mrs. Douglas by throwing stones against her house and breaking her windows. This is too bad but the chief is investigating and the boys will no doubt be made to suffer.

SOME people possess more money than sense. The latest example is Wamnamaker, the Philadelphia merchant, who threw away $200,000 in advertising last year and only pocketed a profit of a million in the transaction.

H. R. BEDFORD, Esq., has moved into his comfortable office in Mr. Austin Kimmerly's building two doors east of his old quarters. Mr. Widdington, of the Big Store, will occupy the remainder of the building.

The steam yacht Ruth arrived in port last Saturday from Oswego, having aboard Messrs. Fred Conde, C. W. Parlier, W. B. Phelps Jr., G. N. Burt and C. G. Ruel. They lost a boat on the voyage. The party are spending a few days duck shooting.

A NUMBER of newspapers are much concerned about the action of the farmers who still persist in holding back their grain instead of sacrificing it at present prices. The agriculturists still continue to follow THE TRIBUNE'S advice, and are consequently attending carefully to their fall ploughing, and will not place their grain in the market for a few weeks to come.

THE town hall presents a busy scene these days, great numbers applying for leases of Reserve farms.

SEVERAL persons went away from the Church of the Redeemer on Wednesday 22nd inst., leaving coats, umbrellas and other articles behind them. The owners of these articles can get them by calling on Mr. J. Carswell, the sexton.

THE next meeting of the Deseronto Temperance Society will be held in Rathbun Hall on Friday, Nov. 7th. The society is in a healthy condition. Messrs. J. W. Bradbeer and Wm. Stoddard were delegates to the Stirling convention.

COW BY LAW.—It is thought that the cow by-law is no longer in force. That is a mistaken idea. A drove of cattlemen have let loose, it seems, on residents of the west end, and the Chief is determined to have owners fined.

Gananoque is discussing the propriety of establishing a night school for boys and young men unable to attend during the regular school hours. Will our School Board provide similar opportunities for the youth of this village?

IMPOUNDED.—The chief does not fancy the task of running cows into the pound, but he must obey instructions, and on Tuesday last he impounded six cows which were found infringing the by-law. Keep an eye to your cattle.

NEW BRIDGE.—Mr. W. Evans, of the shipyard, is busy constructing the frame work of a new bridge which is to be erected over the Napanee river, at Thompson's Mills. It will have two spans of fifty feet each. Mr. James Scantlin is at work on the foundations, piers &c.

NAVIGATION.—The various steamers still continue to ply on their accustomed routes but all report a decreased passenger traffic. The Puritan returned on Wednesday from Gananoque whither she had carried a large cargo of shingles, lath and assorted lumber. Capt. Howard is busy with the tug Bonar at towing operations getting a supply of cedar logs for winter operations at the Cedar Mill.

THE Ottawa Free Press has been advocating a change in the system of procuring divorces in Canada. It very properly maintains that judges of the supreme court and not senators should be the proper tribunal. Poverty should not be a bar to justice being done. The only objection, of course, lies in the fact that there would be nothing left upon which senators might exercise the energies of their gigantic intellects.

BOX SOCIAL.—A Box Social under the auspices of the Deseronto Cornet Band will be held in Rathbun Hall, this evening (Friday). Each lady who attends will bring a box having provisions for two. Each gentleman brings 25 cents and as he enters the hall draws a box containing the name of the young lady with whom he is to share the contents of her box. There will be an immense attendance as every young lady in town has been busy preparing for the event.

OLD FOLK'S CONCERT.—Arrangements have been made with Captain Crawford and we are happy to announce that the Choir of Queen street Methodist Church, Kingston, will give an Old Folk's Concert in the White Church on Friday evening, Nov. 7th. This will be a repetition of that lately given in Kingston which the press of that city declared was one of the richest treats ever given to the people of the Limestone City. There is already a great demand for reserve tickets.

WELCOME HOME.—Rev. I. O. Mallory preached last Sunday with his wonted eloquence to large congregations at both services in the Methodist Church. The Rev. gentleman has met with a cordial welcome among old friends in Deseronto. He enjoyed excellent health in his western home, and has had the best opportunity of amassing much useful information concerning the Indian tribes of that part of Michigan. The readers of the Tribune are already under obligations to him for instructive correspondence.

SELECTION FRUIT.—Mr. Henry Carman has very generously placed on our table a large quantity of splendid apples grown on his extensive orchard at Green Point. The selection embraces specimens of such varieties as the Northern Spy, Fall Pippin, Russets, Snow, and Tolman Sweet. We have rarely seen such splendid samples of fruit in any part of Canada. One of these apples a Northern Spy, weighs one pound and we venture to say it cannot be beaten for size or regularity of contour. Our Deseronto readers who are now laying in their winter supply would find it to their advantage to give Green Point farmers a call before purchasing elsewhere.

MR. PATRICK HART discovered evidence of fire in the Central Offices of the Rathbun Company about two o'clock on Wednesday morning. A still alarm was given and the fire extinguished without much damage being done.

SHIPYARD.—The tug Munson which has been undergoing repairs in the shipyard is ready to proceed to Belleville for her boiler after which she will return to this port for cabin and wheelhouse. The work done is of the most substantial character and she may be regarded now as a completely new vessel.

METHODIST CHURCH.—Rev. John E. Jewell, B. A., of Morven, will preach next Sabbath at both morning and evening services in the Methodist Church. On that day Rev. Mr. Crossley, in accordance with the appointment of the District meeting, will preach the anniversary missionary sermons at Morven.

Prince Edward people paying $5 worth or over of ready-made boots at Carter's get return tickets free.

A fine constitution may be broken and ruined by simple neglect. Many boys ill result from habitual constipation. There is no medicine equal to Ayer's Pills to correct this evil, and restore the system to natural, regular, and healthy action.

In consequence of the war in China the price of Tea is gradually increasing. The Big Store imported largely before the war and are thus in a position to furnish this important article at the same price as heretofore. They distributed samples of their 30c and 50c tea, and the public, after trying it, are buying large quantities, being convinced of its superiority over any tea that can be bought elsewhere at the same or a much higher price.

Deseronto Cornet Band.

The good work goes bravely on. On Wednesday evening the Deseronto Cornet Band had another march-out and a number of citizens were serenaded at their residences or places of business. The following liberal donations were received for the Uniform Fund—A. A. Richardson, $5.00; Wm. Dunning, $3.00; John Mills, $5.00; Caleb Goodmury, $5.00; Mrs. Coleman, $2.00; C. E. Halliday, $2.00; John Jackson, 75cts. The band also desire to acknowledge the receipt of a private contribution of $5.00 from Mr. E. A. Riven, and to state that in the previous report the name of Mr. Wm. Jamieson was unintentionally omitted he having long since contributed $5.00 to the fund. Deducting some expenses, the total amount now on hand is $191.02. The order for uniforms will soon be given, as the generous contributions already received are a sufficient guarantee that the band can easily be secured.

The Big Store has been fortunate in securing a supply of Choice Dairy Butter. Any person who desires to secure good butter for use during the winter season cannot do better than to buy it now at the Big Store.

SCOTT ACT.

Over two hundred delegates assembled at Stirling on Wednesday to consider the propriety of submitting the Scott Act to the electors of Hastings. Dr. Boulter, ex-M. P. P., was called to the chair and addresses were delivered by many of the delegates who expressed their belief that the Act would be carried by all working strenuously until polling day. After full consideration it was resolved to proceed with the preliminary arrangements for submitting the Act and canvassing the County. A general Central Committee was appointed with Dr. F. Wood, M. P. P., President; Rev. F. B. Stratton, Secretary and E. D. O'Flynn, Treas. Conveners were appointed at each electoral district. Rev. D. O. Crossley being appointed for Deseronto. Delegates from Belleville assured the Convention that they would have the hearty co-operation of the temperance people of that city. It will be thus seen that there are stirring times ahead for the electors of Hastings.
